Big Addition Is Urged For Tam Park

Plan Would Create 15 Miles Of Public Seashore Area

An addition of 3,212 acres to Tamalpais State Park that would create 15 miles of public seashore from Golden Gate Bridge to Stinson Beach was recommended by the California Park Commission yesterday.

Major part of the land purchase would involve scenic coastline, now in private ownership. Only area left in private ownership under the proposal would be the village of Muir Beach.

The proposal does not include any of the land of the planned city of Marincello which is mainly in an inland valley.

A commission staff report adopted by the commission in San Francisco yesterday said:

"The proposed additions would require the purchase of all coastal lands from the Stinson Beach corridor downcoast to the Marin Headlands State Park."

The commission, in forwarding the proposal to the State Resources Agency, urged that the project be given high priority.

If the agency approves the project, it would be forwarded to Gov. Edmund G. Brown for submission to the state legislature.

Funds for purchase would come from the 150 million park and recreation bond measure approved by California voters last November.

The report also included leases of a total of 1,260 acres from the Marin Municipal Water District for addition to Tamalpais

Heater Sets Off $10,000 House Fire

Fire swept through the home of the Kenneth R. Lenci family at 165 Central Avenue, Woodacre last night, destroying its contents and causing $10,000 damage to the structure.

Lenci, a clerk at the Embee Market in Corte Madera, his wife and two daughters were not at home when the fire broke out.

The blaze was apparently caused by a defective floor furnace in the hallway.

The family had moved from Fairfax to Woodacre ten months ago, according to Lenci's mother, Mrs. Louis J. Lenci of Crescent Avenue, Woodacre.

"The only clothes they have now are those that were on their backs last night," she said today. The family is staying at her home.

The fire was reported to the Marin County Fire Department at 7:03 p.m. yesterday shortly after Mrs. Lenci and her daughters, Patricia and Marion returned to Woodacre from dinner at her mother's home.

"They had just completed remodeling the kitchen and installing rugs," Lenci's mother reported. "I doubt they'll be able to save any of the furniture. The roof was badly damaged.

"They'll probably stay with us until they decide whether to remodel the interior of the home or start all over again," she said.

Wave Washes Over Island; Man Is Killed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A huge landslide crumbled off a Columbia River cliff and set up a wave that washed over Puget Island today. (See also story, photo, page 2.)

At least one island resident was killed.

He was tentatively identified as Holcomb Gabrielson, 45.

The slide took out telephone and power lines and covered riverside railroad tracks of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle line.

On the three-mile long island —located about 50 miles northwest of Portland—several homes were smashed.

Rusk Stays Away

LONDON (UPI)—A cold today prevented Secretary of State Dean Rusk from attending Sir Winston Churchill's funeral, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said.

Man Loses Grip, Falls Down Cliff

A 43-year-old Oakland man suffered head and leg injuries when he fell from a rope which he and another man were using to lower themselves down a sheer cliff near Stinson Beach today.

Willis Alfred Johnson lost his grip as he was about 50 feet from the bottom of the 250-foot cliff. He hurtled past his fishing partner, Ross S. Smith, and hit the jagged rocks at the bottom.

Johnson was taken to Marin General Hospital by ambulance at noon, after a team of about 18 deputies, firemen and others raised him to the top with a basket and winch from the county's rescue unit.

Smith, a caretaker on the property where the accident happened, said he fishes there often. It was the first time Johnson had come with him.

Johnson parked his pick-up truck on a small road off Highway 1, a mile and half south of Stinson Beach. Shortly before 8 a.m. the two men lowered a rope over the cliff and began to descend, with Smith going first.

Johnson suddenly slipped and fell. Smith quickly scrambled

Bay Fill On 54 Acres Asked In San Rafael

Owners of a total 54 acres of tidal land in east San Rafael have applied for navigational permits to fill their property for development.

The applications were filed with the Army Corps of Engineers by James Fischgrund of Beverly Hills, owner of 34 acres, and Darrell Edwards of Oakland, owner of 20 acres.

The land is east of San Rafael Cays and outside the dike. The San Rafael city council has ordered that the city public works department issue no filling permits on tidal land east of the dike, at least until the San Rafael General Plan is adopted.

Councilmen Harry A. Barbier said today there has been no city fill permit issued on the land involved in the applications before the Corps of Engineers.

A total 290,000 cubic yards of fill is the estimated need for the Edwards property and 420,000 yards of fill for the Fischgrund property.

The Corps of Engineers considers filling permits on the navigational issue only. It thus will consider only those objections on navigation.

The Corps will decide April 1, or soon after, if the application will be issued. Meanwhile the corps will accept objections mailed in triplicate to the office at 100 McAllister Street in San Francisco.

The 20-acre property is adjacent and east of the 34-acre parcel. The application said the lands would be diked and then filled by hydraulic dredging. The dike would be about 10 feet above existing grade and four feet above mean high tide.

Ignacio Cats Endangered With Rabies

Destruction of pet cats which have been allowed to run loose near the Roger Wilco Market in Ignacio where a rabid skunk was found Thursday has been recommended by Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer.

"The skunk was seen with several cats before it died of rabies Thursday afternoon," Dr. Albrecht reported.

"Any cat which had come in contact with the animal is very likely to develop a case of rabies within the next two months. Personal contact with any of these animals may be injurious to humans," she declared.

The skunk, the second rabid animal reported in the county this year, was seen behind the market by an employee Thursday. It appeared to be sick and staggering, Dr. Albrecht said.

The Humane Society was called but the skunk was dead on the arrival of an officer of the society at the store.

Tests for rabies which were completed yesterday by the health department showed the skunk died of rabies.

"The incubation period for rabies in cats, as well as dogs, is between two weeks and two months after the animal has come into contact with a rabid animal," Dr. Albrecht said.

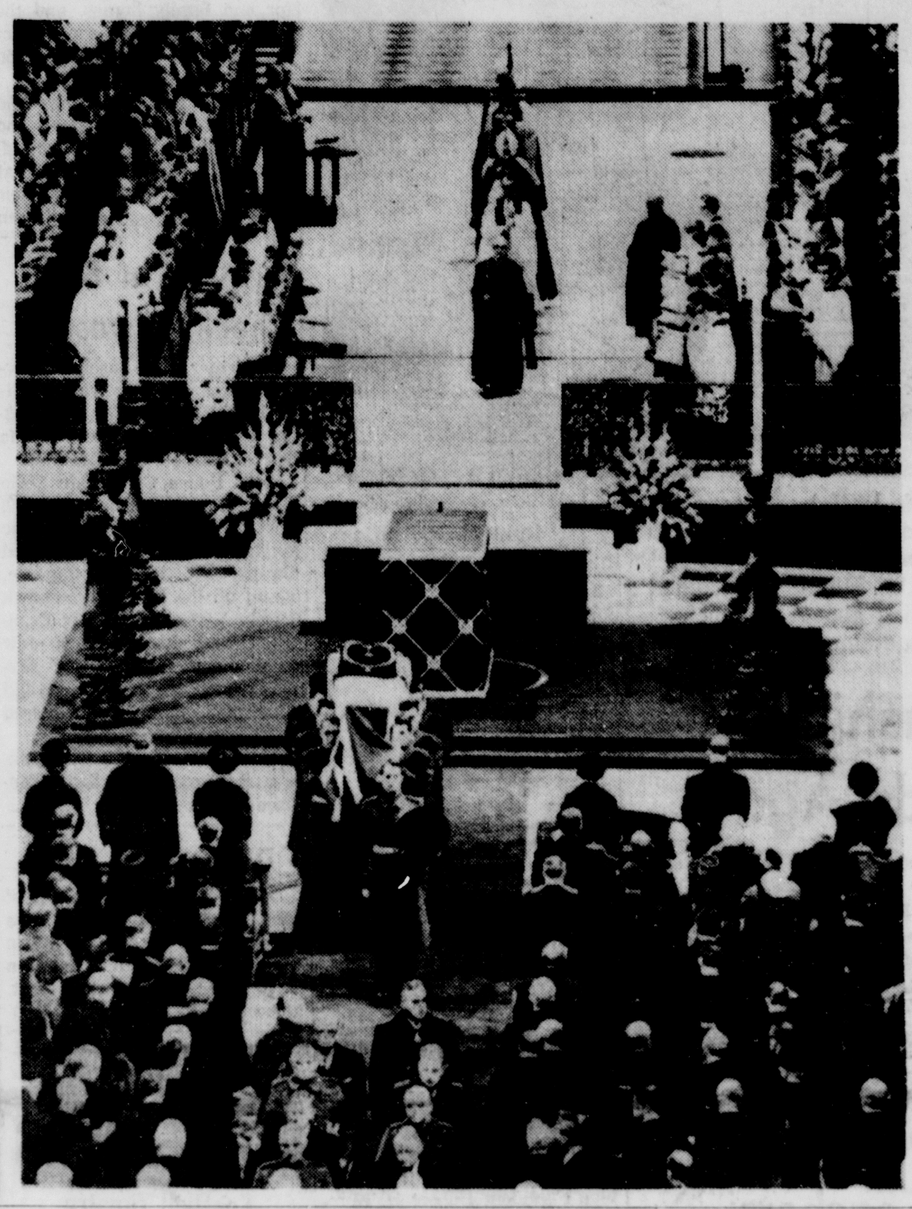

She urged Marin cat owners who allow their cats outside the home to have them vaccinated for rabies.

Sir Winston Is Buried After State Funeral

LAST RITES

Sir Winston Churchill's coffin begins its procession down the aisle of St. Paul's Cathedral at the end of today's state funeral service. A record 321,000 persons—from kings to commoners—filed past Churchill's bier during the three days his flag-draped coffin rested in Westminster Hall before today's last rites in London.

Nation Pays Last Respects To Leader

LONDON (UPI)—Sir Winston Churchill sleeps in peace tonight in the rolling hills where he was born 90 years ago.

Britain swept aside the protocol and precedents of centuries today to pay her last full measure of devotion. A majestic 63-minute procession moved through the streets of London where Churchill found his fame. Queen Elizabeth and the official representatives of 112 nations mourned him at a state funeral in the cathedral church of St. Paul, an honor never before accorded to a British commoner.

Then a train carried Churchill's coffin back to his native Oxfordshire, and in a 10-minute commital service he was buried beside the graves of his father and mother.

Only members of the Churchill family were in the graveyard of the little parish church of St. Martin's at Bladon when the rector, the Rev. John James, spoke the last words over Churchill:

'EARTH TO EARTH'

"For as much as it hath pleased Almighty God of His great mercy to take upon Himself the soul of our dear brother here departed, we therefore commit his body to the ground. Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust. In sure and certain hope of the resurrection to eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Lady Churchill sprinkled earth on the coffin and then, in the falling dusk, Churchill's body was lowered into the grave.

There were two phases of today's ceremonies.

The nation's tribute ended when the coffin was placed aboard a train at platform No. 11 in Waterloo Station. Then Churchill belonged to his family and to history.

SPECIAL TRAIN

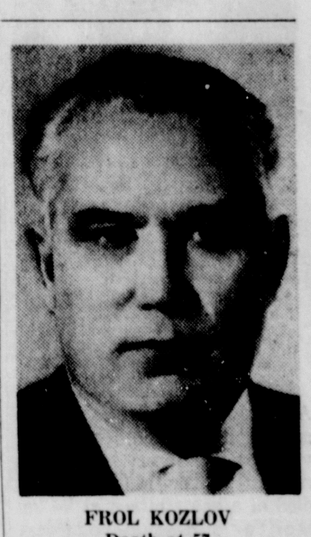

Engine No. 3405 — built in World War II and christened "The Winston Churchill" — drew the funeral train slowly away. Only the crew and members of the Churchill family were aboard. But Britain's tribute followed Churchill all the way to his grave.

Every small railroad station on the way to Bladon was crowded. Thousands of persons stood silently as the train went through Clapham Junction, Barnes Common, Virginia Water, Ascot, Reading, Brackness, Wokingham.

Finally it came to journey's end, two miles from Bladon, and was taken in a hearse two miles to the cemetery.

At the graveside was the nation's final token of tribute — a wreath of white flowers and a black edged card bearing the

FROL KOZLOV
Death at 57

Former Russian No. 2 Man Dies

MOSCOW (UPI)—Frol Kozlov, a former powerful member of the Soviet presidium and a co-worker of deposed Premier Nikita Khrushchev, died today, the official Tass news agency reported. He was 57.

The Tass announcement said:

"Frol Kozlov, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist party of the Soviet Union Central Committee and of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, hero of socialist labor, died in Moscow today aged 57."

Kozlov was dropped as a party secretary and member of the Presidium Nov. 16, 1964.

Kozlov at one time was considered the political heir to Khrushchev.

But a brain hemorrhage in April, 1963, partially paralyzed him and ended his days of power.

Khrushchev was reported to have hoped that Kozlov would regain his health. Khrushchev was said to have been on the verge of installing Kozlov as Soviet president. But the paralysis did not improve and Khrushchev named Anastas I. Mikoyan as president instead.

The strapping Kozlov, once considered the Kremlin's handsomest leader, continued to hold a place in the Soviet hierarchy. But it was in name only.

His political end came last November when he was dropped from the all-powerful party Presidium — less than a month after Khrushchev's ouster.

In his heyday, Kozlov moved in power. It was to him that Khrushchev turned in 1959 to find the man to pave a road to the United States for a subsequent visit by the then-premier.

Kozlov opened the Soviet exhibition in New York that year. Khrushchev later followed, making his often-stormy tour of America.

Herring Run Begins In Bay

The annual run of herring in Richardson Bay has begun.

Observers along the sea wall in Sausalito said this morning that the water was getting white from the thousands of fish below the surface.

"You could catch them in garbage can lids and carton boxes," one observer reported.

Along with the herring have come hundreds of seagulls to snatch the easy prey from the water.

An audience of 171, mostly doctors, trainers and coaches, were on hand for the morning session of the third annual Marin Sports Injury Conference today at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant in San Rafael.

The attendance was expected to swell for the afternoon and dinner sessions today, with many registrations received from persons who planned to attend just the dinner. Speaker for tonight's session will be Craig Morton, All-American quarterback for University of California.

The conference got underway at 9 a.m. and will continue through the day, winding up with the dinner starting at 6:30 p.m. It is being sponsored jointly by the Marin Medical Society and the Marin County Schools.

Dr. Virgil S. Hollis, superintendent of the Marin County Schools Department, dedicated the conference to the memory of Bill Leiser, sports editor of the San Francisco Chronicle who died Jan. 16.

The opening session of the conference was titled "New Developments in Safety Equipment," and featured talks, a movie, and panel discussion. Speakers were Richard Leech of the Riddell Manufacturing Co., Dr. Douglas Ramsey, bone and joint specialist, and Ray Carrigan of the Brunswick Manufacturing Co. Joining them with a panel discussion were Dr. Martin Blazina, UCLA team physician; Merlin Olsen, Novato High

Court Reaffirms Dorado Decision

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The precedent-setting Dorado decision was reaffirmed yesterday by the California Supreme Court, confirming the Aug. 31 ruling that a suspect must be advised of his right to a lawyer and to remain silent once an official investigation "focuses" upon him.

But in a related case, the court decided that the Dorado ruling would not be retroactive, placating fears of state law enforcement officials that thousands of prisoners might be released.

Sentencing In Driving Case Off

Sentencing of George Albert Barnett of San Anselmo, facing three of five drunken driving charges, was continued yesterday by Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Municipal Court until 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Reason for the delay was that Barnett, 42, former co-owner of San Rafael Associates Inc., is in the psychiatric ward of Veteran's Hospital in Martinez. Judge Wilson directed the probation office to determine by that time if the defendant should be returned for the sentencing.

The judge said he will then either issue a bench warrant for Barnett's arrest, or pronounce judgment through appearance of Barnett's attorney, W. O. Weissich of San Rafael, and issue a warrant to take the defendant into custody.

The continuance was over protest by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, who asked that a warrant be immediately issued. Barnett, of 125 Crane Drive, who has two prior drunken driving convictions and sentencings, is scheduled for sentencing on the three identical charges, and is later to be arraigned on two additional drunken driving charges.

Doctors Report Thefts

Thefts from two San Rafael area doctors' cars were reported to police and sheriff's deputies yesterday.

First report came to the Marin County Sheriff's office at 7 a.m. yesterday, from Dr. Herbert C. Lee of 711 Monticello Road, Terra Linda. He said about $100 worth of items, including a man's suit, two transistor radios and a small ornamental monkey, were taken from his locked Volkswagen, in his driveway, between midnight and 6:45 a.m.

At 10:40 a.m., Dr. Rafael G. Dufficy Jr. of 31 Palm Avenue, San Rafael, told police a metal ammunition box, containing about $73 worth of items, was taken from the back seat of his unlocked car.

Missing, he said, were a blood pressure device and an otoscope, worth $35 each, plus a stethoscope and a flashlight.

Lie Detector Tests Given

San Rafael police said today they may give lie detector tests to employees of Aquarium Beautiful, 1409 Fourth Street, in an effort to solve two thefts of money which occurred in the past two weeks.

Second report came at 7 p.m. yesterday from manager Patricia Miller, who said about $60 in cash, plus another $50 in checks, were taken from her purse yesterday after she left it behind the counter.

She said about $75 disappeared Jan. 16, and she thought then it was a cash register error. Her bookkeeper and the cash register company later insisted it was not.

Oregon, Washington Hit By Floods Again

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Heavy rains sent rivers over their banks in Oregon, Washington and western Idaho today bringing more flood misery to areas still recovering from the Far West's disastrous Christmas week floods.

Oregon Gov. Mark Hatfield said 150 to 200 families in the state had been forced from their homes and 26 state highways were closed by flood waters or rain-triggered mud slides.

In Washington, floods and slides blocked many highways and 170 persons were marooned by a washed-out bridge at the Crystal Mountain ski resort near Tacoma.

Flood waters surged into Boise, Idho, and public works officials there described the situation as "very serious." Hundreds of volunteers sandbagged a creek bank to hold back the water.

Weather reports called for diminised rainfall in most areas by tomorrow, but warm temperatures caused melting of mountain snow packs and added to the flood threat.

However, there appeared to be no danger of a repeat of the Christmas week floods, which killed at least 42 persons and caused hundreds of millions of dollars in damage in five states.

Hatfield called out National Guard units yesterday at Milton-Freewater and La Grande in eastern Oregon and at Oregon City near Portland.

More than 500 school teachers from throughout Marin County attended an institute on "Individualized Instruction" at Terra Linda High School yesterday.

John D. McNeil, director of supervised teaching at UCLA talked about "Organizing the Classroom for Individualized Instruction" at the closing general session.

Between the general sessions, there were section meetings with Margart Lynch, professor of education at San Francisco State College, leading the section on "Individualized Instruction in the Language Arts;" David Austin, general consultant, Merced County Schools, "Individualized Instruction in Mathematics;" and Penrod Moss, curriculum consultant, Dixie School District, "Individualized Instruction in Social Studies."

The institute was sponsored by the Marin County Schools Office.

Superior Court Going To Center

There will be a preview of "Hall of Justice" activity at the Civic Center next week when Superior Court sessions are conducted in the administration building Monday through Thursday.

Court sessions will be conducted in the supervisor's chambers Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, and in the planning commission room Tuesday.

The court sessions were scheduled at the Civic Center because there is no space at the courthouse annex in San Rafael due to alternations.

A second floor court room at the annex is being revamped into two courtrooms, to make room for the fourth Superior Court.

Judge receiving the Civic Center assignment had not been named at noon today.

TO BE 'IN'

You Just Have To Be Sick

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There is a new yardstick to judge who is really "in" in Washington circles. Almost everybody who is anybody has been laid low by the "executive flu."

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon are the two latest victims of the malady, which was given its name by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, a sometime sniffler himself.

The vice president, referring to the type of ailments that put President and Mrs. Johnson into the hospital for several days with severe colds and sore throats, said earlier this week that he had a mild cold but didn't believe he was fair game for the "executive flu" casualty list.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., who was also at Bethesda Naval Hospital during the President's stay and is still there, had a different name for the affliction. He termed it "inaugural virus" and said yesterday the doctors are going to let him go home today or Sunday.

Patman said he wasn't sure where he caught his cold, but that his symptoms were similar to those felt by several other lawmakers who blamed sore throats on exposure during the inauguration festivities.

Kettenhofen Gives View On Marincello

Supervisor Ernest N. Kettenhofen explained today why he nearly walked out of the meeting of Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen in Sausalito Wednesday night.

He emphasized he is not against any citizen or public official's expressing opinions on such matters as the Marincello development in South Marin.

"My only concern is that these opinions are expressed under orderly processes set up," said Kettenhofen. "In other words, we must follow the ground rules."

The supervisor explained that the Marincello site is now zoned for one family homes, and the question before the supervisors is, whether it should be rezoned to planned community.

He said public hearings had been held, and city councils and other organizations and individuals had a chance to appear at the hearings to express their views. But the hearing had been closed as of last Tuesday.

"Once the hearing is closed," said Kettenhofen, "I felt it was out of order for any organization to try to pressure us."

Kettenhofen said his second point was that city representatives at the meeting should have had specific authorization from their city councils and city constituents if they were going to act officialiy as a body that night.

"To repeat," said Kettenhofen, "I am wholeheartedly in favor of hearing all opinions, but they should be heard in accordance with orderly processes. That's all I was trying to get across."

Suspect In Bad Checks Arrested

A former San Anselmo service station operator was arrested in Napa yesterday for passing a bad check for $100 at the Drake Market, San Anselmo.

Asst. Police Chief Sam Serio found the man, John Alire, 39, working as a garage mechanic in Napa. Serio said Alire and his partner, Jose Bustamonte, closed up the Red Hill Mohawk Service Station at 781 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard a few months ago after passing several checks at the market and with the man who delivered gasoline to the station.

Serio said he hoped to arrest Bustamonte in San Francisco this afternoon.

Theologian Has Humor, Eloquence

Eminent theologian Dr. Paul Tillich came to the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo yesterday and drew a capacity crowd of teachers and students in Alexander Hall.

The 78-year-old philosopher presented a vast eloquence, brilliant clarity, and humor and humility to the seminarians.

He gave no formal talk. He simply sat down before his audience of 200 and began answering questions. The hour and 40 minute session brought a broad range of questions and an even broader range of answers.

Several of the questions referred to Dr. Tillich written works, especially his 20 volume Systematic Theology.

"Let's forget about the books," Dr. Tillich finally said. "Now what I really think is . . . "

This brought roars of laughter.

Dr. Tillich, whose books have clarified the relationship between Christian faith and the present day problems of the world, was asked about the "moral imperative" and religion.

He said that moral action involves a "fullfillment of that for which man was created—the content of one's essential being."

He said it is motivated by love such as the love described in the 13th Chapter of Corinthians. This includes love of God and love of fellow man. "And I would add love toward oneself as God would want one to be."

This, Dr. Tillich said, is a love "not in the power of men's will. It must be beyond ourselves."

Dr. Tillich said the Ten Commandments and the commandments of the Sermon on the Mount, embody the wisdom of mankind.

These are tested laws which can guide us in our acts.

Thus the structure of morality consists of the love at top with the wisdom of mankind below and the concrete moment or situation involving a free act below that.

To another question, Dr. Tillich said the "counter reformation" in the Catholic church happily appears to be at an end. The counter reformation has almost eliminated the "prophetic spirit" of the church.

If the next session of the Vatican Council succeeds in giving liberty of expression to the clergy it will have "historical consequences," Dr. Tillich said and the prophetic spirit will be restored.

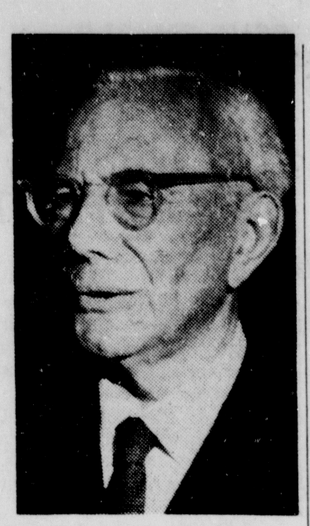

Dr. Tillich spoke also about the basic question that motivates classic philosophy. It is—"why is there something and not nothing."

This cannot be answered by logic. Each logical answer only prompts another series of "why" questions. The basic question can only be answered in terms of theological symbols and philosophical concepts.

Dr. Theodore A. Gill, president of the seminary and a former student of Dr. Tillich, was able to bring Dr. Tillich for yesterday's talk.

Dr. Tillich left his native Germany in 1933 because of his opposition to Hitler. He has taught at many seminaries throughout the United States and is now at Union Seminary in New York. He is temporarily at University of California Santa Barbara and is lecturing at the Center for the study of Democratic Actions at Santa Barbara.

He is in the Bay Area this weekend on a lecture trip.

State Takes Over Those Dead Eagles

Those dead eagles which have raised the big stir in Marin since they were shot by Point Reyes Station rancher Leroy Martinelli Monday, are now in possession of the U. S. Field and Wildlife Service.

Service enforcement officer Jack Downs came to Marin from his Sacramento office yesterday to talk to Martinelli and others who investigated the shooting. He also picked up the eagles from Sheriff Sgt. Michael McLean who had them in the freezer of his Point Reyes Station home.

Downs said that one bird was a bald eagle and the other a golden eagle as originally assumed. Downs had said, after looking at pictures, he thought both were bald eagles.

Martinelli said he shot the birds after they killed his lambs. He said he has lost seven lambs to eagles this week. The lambs are in cold storage at the Martinelli ranch.

Eagles are protected by federal law with penalties up to $500 and six months in jail.

Downs said he will decide Monday if he will press charges against Martinelli.

Retired Employees Elect Officers

Cyril J. Wright of Mill Valley has been elected president of the Marin Chapter of the National Assn. of Retired Civil Employees for 1965.

Henry Gareis is vice president; Harry Kranz, second vice president; Anna L. Rado, secretary and Leah Jarrett, treasurer. The organization meets at noon on the second Wednesday of each month at Scout Hall, 177 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley.

Commission Urged To Adhere To Plan

Directors of the Bolinas Community Inc. urged the Marin last night to adhere to the Bolinas-Stinson Beach Master Plan when considering requests for adjustments and variances in Bolinas.

The directors agreed last night that they are generally in favor of the parks, recreation and open space master plan which will be the subject of a public hearing Monday by the planning commission.

McCullough Due Police Honors

Robert F. McCullough of 79 Almenar Drive, Greenbrae, who used his car to stop a man suspected of being involved in a hit-run accident last summer and who was later sued for his effort, will receive the 1964 Outstanding Citizen Award from the Marin County Peace Officers Assn. tonight.

The award will be presented by the group at its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the non-commissioned officers' club at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Text of the peace officers' award is as follows:

"In grateful appreciation to Robert F. McCullough.

"Whereas it is an objective of this association to honor those citizens who further the cause of good law enforcement for the betterment of the community; and,

"Whereas the action of Robert F. McCullough on July 9, 1964, in apprehending a suspected hit-run driver exemplified the conduct of a responsible citizen in serving his community,

"Therefore be it resolved that this association presents to Robert F. McCullough the outstanding citizen award of 1964 for his public spirited action in the furtherance of good law enforcement."

A $100,259 suit was filed by John Patrick Lee, 34, the driver McCullough stopped after bicyclist Robert G. Miller, 12, of Greenbrae, was injured in the accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

The suit alleged McCullough "wilfully and intentionally" caused his car to collide with Lee's and caused $259 damage to Lee's vehicle.

Punitive damages also were sought by the plaintiff for "humiliation and distress" and for suffering "great mental anguish." No date for hearing on the suit has been set.

Charges against Lee were dismissed in November after the jury hearing the case was deadlocked 11 to 1 for acquittal.

back up the rope and ran to the road, where he flagged down the passing car of E. H. Lindelli, Marin County road superintendent.

Lindelli used his radio to call the county fire department.

Firemen alerted sheriff's deputies, the State Division of Beaches and Parks at Stinson Beach and the California Highway Patrol.

Assistant county fire chief Stanley Rowan was the first to reach the bottom at 9:30 a.m. He used parts of a wrecked automobile to protect Johnson from the cold wind until the basket was lowered.

At 10 a.m. Rowan, along with fireman Howard Lee, sheriff's deputy Robert Bertram and Smith, started to raise the injured man to the top.

County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom said Johnson was conscious during the rescue operation.

The accident occurred within 200 feet of the spot where another man fell and was critically injured a few weeks ago, Bloom said.

Paris captured 100,000 pigeons by net in 1964 and carried them into the country to keep them in captivity for a time. Hopefully they will forget about Paris and not try to return.

PARK

State Park.

If the purchase and leases are all achieved, the state could build 565 family camping units, group camps for 250 persons and 204 picnic units.

The purchase involved 4.5 miles of coastline.

The commission report described the beach as one of "the most spectacularly beautiful examples of coastal scenery" in the state, but warned that the property "will soon be lost for park purposes if not acquired soon.

"To purchase the remaining privately owned lands, the state will be competing with the subdivider and the industrial developer."

Mrs. Vera L. Schultz of Mill Valley, who serves as a consultant for Frouge Corp., developers of Marincello, said today she has known of the park proposal for some time and the planning of Marincello has been done with the park in mind.

"The people of Marin County will thank the Frouge Corporation," Mrs. Schultz said. "Marincello's plans have expedited the park proposal by 10 years."

Early approval by the legislature would mean that the money would be available July 1 and the acreage acquired a year after. This would be possible only "if things go exceedingly well," according to Edward F. Dolder, chief of the State Division of Beaches and Parks.

On the coast, the report said, lower portions on Highway 1 would be preserved for private development such as motels, hotels and restaurants. This would fit in with the West Marin Master Plan.

The commission yesterday also recommended that Marin Headlands State Park, which includes portions of Forts Barry and Baker, be purchased. This embraces 320 acres.

Two San Rafael Youths Arrested In Disturbance

Two 19-year-old San Rafael youths were arrested on a disturbance charge last night after a Mill Valley man complained that they had kicked in his car doors and shattered the windshield.

Police said they might add charges of car tampering.

Booked were Thomas Henry Alan Muirhead of 14 Sunset Way and Richard Allen Ingraham of 120 H Street. They were arrested at 11 p.m. at A and Julia streets by officer Kenneth Homen.

Homen said he was approached at 10 p.m. by Peter Rucinski of 106 Alta Vista Avenue, Mill Valley, who said four youths were following him in an effort to start a fight. At 10:45 p.m., Homan questioned the quartet, but released them because Rucinski was unsure which two had kicked his car.

Fifteen minutes later, Homen said, he saw Ruckinski's car on A Street, with Muirhead and Ingraham following him on foot, yelling and swearing. When the car stopped, they began hitting the car's sides and windows.

This time, Homen made the arrest.

Leech showed a film on the developments of protective football equipment. This was followed by a talk from Dr. Ramsey on training and prevention of injuries. Carrigan talked on newer developments of football equipment which go as far as "self cleaning cleats." Much improvement has been made with football helmets, padding and cleats, it was pointed out in the discussions.

Man Killed Immediately In Air Crash

Harold R. McClish, 63, of Healdsburg, pilot of a light plane which crashed at Drake's Estuary Thursday, was killed immediately by the crash, said Frank J. Keaton, Marin County coroner, today.

McClish was pronounced dead about two hours after the crash by a Coast Guard doctor. His passenger, Condido Morales, 20, also of Healdsburg, was transferred in good condition today from Letterman General Hospital at the Presidio in San Francisco to Hillsborough Hospital in San Mateo County.

The men were taking off from a sand bar in the estuary after a clam-digging expedition when the plane crashed. After McClish was pronounced dead, the Coast Guard doctor pulled his body to high ground where it was found yesterday morning by Asst. County Coroner William C. Bradley and Sheriff's Sgt. Michael McLean.

McClish lived all his life in Healdsburg, where he operated a prune ranch.

He was a member of the Sotoyome chapter of the American Legion and Friendship Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, both in Healdsburg.

He is survived by his wife, Eda; his father, Henry, Healdsburg; a brother, James, of Winters, Yolo County, and a sister, Mrs. Madge Spindler, of Floral Park, N.Y.

Funeral will be held Monday at 2 p.m. in the Chapel of the Fred Young Mortuary, Healdsburg.

CHURCHILL

royal crest of Queen Elizabeth. In her own handwriting was this inscription: "From the nation and the commonwealth in grateful remembrance."

The ceremony ended at 4 p.m. here in London the captains and the kings began to depart. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief Justice Earl Warren, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and the other Americans took off in an Air Force plane.

The coffin, draped with a Union Jack and bearing Churchill's insignia as a knight of the realm, was taken from St. Paul's to Tower Pier. There it was placed on the barge Havengore, and on flood tide was taken to Festival Hall Pier across the Thames and to Waterloo Station.

Guns boomed 19 times from the Tower of London, the only time a commoner ever has had more than a 17-gun salute. Royal Air Force planes swept by in salute. And over the microphones of the British Broadcasting Corp. came the voice of Dwight D. Eisenhower:

"I pause to pay a personal tribute to the giant who now passes from us. For the millions of Americans who served with me, Churchill was Britain — her courage in adversity, her calmness in danger, her moderation in success.

"At this moment as our hearts stand at attention we say our affectionate though sad goodbye . . . here was a champion of freedom. May God grant that we keep the lessons he taught us in his deeds, in his words, in his life."

Eisenhower paused for a moment and then in a choked voice said: "And so now to you, Sir Winston, my old friend — farewell."

It was shortly before noon when the state funeral ended. A trumpeter, high in the "whispering gallery" of St. Paul's, sent the strains of "Last Post" soaring through the arches and corridors of the cathedral. Queen Elizabeth and the other mourners spoke their final amen.

He Just Had To Play Horn

Jazz trumpeteer Muggsy Spanier of 303 South Street, Sausalito, pushed his heart convalescence a little hard the other day in New Orleans by slipping out of the hospital to play in a funeral march.

Spanier, who suffered a heart ailment several months ago in Detroit, went to New Orleans to be treated in the Oschner Medical Center.

Last Wednesday as he was preparing to leave the hospital, Spanier heard a jazzband "playing those dirges. They really wail. It's a very emotional thing. I just had to get up and play with them."

"I walked for 12 blocks and played for three," said Spanier.

San Rafael Police Arrest Transient

Ikey Arthur Sanchez, 23, a transient, was booked by San Rafael police at 3:25 a.m. today at Fourth Street and Lincoln Avenue, charged with disturbance and resisting arrest.

'Ink Trick' Helps In An Emergency

By EUNICE FARMER

Never underestimate the ingenuity of a man! On a recent weekend vacation, one of the men in our party discovered a loose button on his suit coat. Of course, everyone expected me to be equipped with a sewing kit, but all I could offer was a needle and a spool of orange thread.

Our friend proceeded to sew his button on with confidence, orange thread and all (good job too!).

When he was finished, he calmly took out his pen and covered the thread with black ink. He claims this "ink trick" has helped him out more than once. So, gals—let's take heed and use this trick when we have an emergency.

I like the blouson type overblouse. Will you please send me instructions on how to put the two slots or cuts at the hem like the blouses you buy?

Mrs. G. E.

Dear Mrs. G. E.

Before you finish the hem of the overblouse, which will form a casing for the tie on the overblouse, you must make two buttonholes near the center front, just above the finished hem line. The buttonhole will be made through a single layer of fabric, not through the hem allowance. Proceed with the hem and thread the tie through the hem and bring the ends through the buttonholes so the tie can be tied from the right side.

If you are using elastic at the lower edge of the blouse, make a narrow hem for the elastic casing and eliminate the buttonslits. Make the overblouse wider than usual at the lower edge for fullness that is needed.

Mrs. A. B. Kaylor, Winter Haven, Fla., wins this week's Tailor Trix pressing board and the thanks of many large husbands.

"When I found I couldn't get my husband's large size undershirts at our local stores, I had to find a way to enlarge them. I cut the shirt under the arm all the way through, staying on the rib section of the knit. I took some old undershirts and took the desired width from the front section, including the ribbing.

"I sewed the extra strip in place on the wrong side, matching the ribbing at the underarm of sleeve. After it was stitched, I turned it right side out and stitched again. It is almost invisible because the stitching is exactly on the ribbing. He is so much more comfortable because they fit."

When the neckband and waistband of your sweaters have stretched out of shape, don't throw them away. Buy the elastic type thread and hand sew it on the wrong side of the ribbing. This is done with a small running stitch, holding the band in slightly as you stitch. Place the rows about ½-inch apart. You'll be thrilled with the way the sweater will hold its shape.

Sew Simple is for you. Let me know what your problems are and we will try to answer the most common questions in the column. Also, please send me the little short cut ideas you use. You may win a Tailor Trix pressing board, too! Adress Sew Simple, in care of the Independent-Journal.

CHALLENGE TO WOMEN

Massive Attack Urged In Women's Education

Sixth in a series of articles based on the weekend symposium "The Challenge to Women: The Biologic Avalanche," presented by the University of California School of Medicine, San Francisco Medical Center.

By BARBARA HOSMER

An Indiana University education professor posed some crucial questions and called for a "massive attack" on women's education problems to develop more meaningful roles.

The professor, Dr. Kate Hevner Mueller, said vital questions to be asked are "What is the place we want women to take in our society?" "What information, skills and what attitudes will be needed for these roles?"; and "Through what subject matter and methods can they be taught?"

The central problem for today's American woman is her lack of designated, accepted and continuing role, believes Dr Mueller.

"AS THIS COUNTRY has moved from a pioneering and agriculture society to a highly organized, affluent, industrial society, we have deprived our women of self-respecting and significant work. Motherhood does not solve this problem," Dr. Mueller said.

"It is no more sufficient for a woman to be only wife and mother than for a man to be only husband and father. To be a fully developed personality means entering into the ongoing life of the world. Today's world is one of industry, business, science and production, of organization and travel.

"As housewifery becomes industrialized, women's role in it is minimized year after year. Motherhood cannot be minimized, but it lasts for only a few all-too-brief decades," Dr. Mueller said. "Women" today are 'procreationally underemployed'."

Dr. Mueller said that it has been too long accepted by men and by women that women's personality growth is accomplished through the husband and children even though "this is no longer a realistic view in American society nor a possible view psychologically."

SHE SAID THAT there are many determents in America to women's developing their full potential—including male resistance, women's own disinterest, propaganda glamorizing housewifery, lack of knowledge by women about hazards and advantages of various careers, immobility, lower wages than men, home responsibilities, and long tradition. Yet, she pointed out, other countries with longer traditions have a larger percentage of women in high level jobs.

AS TO WHY OUR society doesn't cry out for reform against limitations and discrepancies to the lag in achievement of U. S. women, Dr. Mueller said that the problems are terribly complex.

"Women are vastly different and need different kinds of action. The lower echelons need protective labor laws and the upper strata need opportunity for advancement.

"Younger women need special kinds of counseling and older women need opened college doors and longer, slower periods for study and training."

She called also for more day care centers for young mothers and part time jobs for older workers, and car pools for suburban workers and students.

"MANY WOMEN admittedly want nothing changed; others are married to men who want nothing changed," Dr. Mueller said. "Too many college women have been educated to be dilettantes in homemaking . . . the arts . . . community service and in employment."

Pointing out that this generation of young women being educated is quite different from any other, Dr. Mueller called for a "massive attack" in education of future female generations, an attack that probably must start with a vast job of educating the whole public.

OTHER PHASES of the "attack" would deal with depth of the individual woman's needs, significance for our way of life, importance of women's contribution to gross national product.

"On every campus there should be at least one specialist on the educational needs of women and their major undertaking will be educating the faculty and administrators to the woman's point of view," she said, and called for a public relations campaign to sell the idea to the public and to promote it in the mass media as the concepts of romance, homemaking and consumer buying have been.

SHE ALSO URGED an extensive course in the schools for girls to study problems of women with an historic and realistic approach to today's demands.

Dr. Mueller pointed out that nine out of ten women will work 25 years outside the home, and said:

"THE FIRST IMPOSSIBLE demand is that a young woman pay no attention to her contemporary or peer groups' values and plans, skip the activities and experiences of friends and relatives in the age group nearest above her, the 20s or early 30s, but keep her mind firmly on the problem, skills and experience characteristic of the 35 to 50 age group."

NEXT: "Forty Year Old Jitters in the Urban Woman."

Redwood Highway Traffic Moving, But Pace Is Slow

THE REDWOOD HIGHWAY is an economic lifeline for the nine counties of the Redwood Empire from San Francisco to Grants Pass, Ore.

This is what the Redwood Empire Assn. has been saying for more than 40 years. In fact, their very repetition has rendered the words less forceful.

While the words may have lost some punch, the fact has not changed.

The fact was never so forcefully set forth as at last week's quarterly meeting of the Redwood Empire Assn. executive board in San Francisco.

SAM HELWER, STATE HIGHWAY engineer for the district that embraces the flood devastated areas, made a special trip down from Eureka to bring a first-hand report of the condition of the Redwood Highway and its major "tributaries."

What he had to say about the number of bridges out and the estimated cost of restoring full travel squared with what had already been published elsewhere. But Helwer gave all the statistics a new, human dimension.

Over and over he referred to the race to get a road reopened to bring food and other necessary supplies into areas isolated since Christmas.

There were references to forest product industries in Sonoma County, relatively far removed from the devastated areas, facing shutdown (and layoff of workers) because raw materials could not be supplied from the northern forests by highway or rail.

The basic economy of Humboldt and Del Norte Counties has been dealt a shattering blow. The sooner full highway and rail facilities are restored, the sooner economic recovery can be hoped for.

HELWER TOLD HIS San Francisco audience with justifiable pride that he had driven his own passenger car to San Francisco over the Redwood Highway, without chains. Except when closed by new slides or when new rains make it so muddy as to be temporarily impassable, Redwood Highway will remain open—on a very restricted basis—until completely restored which may not be in less than three years, he said.

The restrictions? From a point about 10 miles north of Laytonville all the way to Garberville the highway is open only for convoy travel during night hours. All vehicles (trucks, pickups, passenger cars, and whatnot) headed in one direction are convoyed through this area, taking about half the night. Then the other half the night is consumed convoying all those headed in the opposite direction. Passage is guaranteed in convoy. Heavy equipment stands by to pull or push any who find it too slippery or who otherwise get stuck. During daylight hours, the route is closed again to permit reconstruction to proceed apace Helwer confidently predicted that by June when vacation time arrives, there will be at least a two-lane hardtop road open even in the most devastated areas. It may be subject to construction delays and controls, but it will be open to all, day or night, he promised.

HEROES WERE ABUNDANT in the flood crises. The Division of Highways had its full share.

There is one that even Sam Helwer, the tough little Highway Engineer, cannot tell you about without choking up just a bit. (And you can't hear the story from him without the same reaction.)

It concerns a retired highway maintenance foreman named Sam McCush. Sam retired in 1954 after 38 years of service along the Redwood Highway.

He is now 78 years old. Apparently a condition of his state pension is that he may not receive any other pay from the state.

But that didn't stop him for an instant when the flood struck.

Sam Helwer will tell you how old Sam McCush, 78 years old and retired since 1954, voluntarily took charge of a hastily-assembled crew and led them for 14 days and 14 nights of invaluable repair and preventative work.

"His 38 years of experience was priceless at a time like that, and he knew we couldn't pay him a dime," says Helwer of McCush.

Heroes deserve recognition.

Hero Sam McCush deserves recognition. He deserves to have some legislator see what can be done about amending the law, if necessary, to accord him the monetary recognition he is due from public funds.

And equally important, the legislature should by resolution officially say "thank you" to Sam McCush on behalf of all of us.

HONEST AT A PRICE

Nervousness and a bit of lingering honesty by a thief helped a tourist in Holland to retrieve his passport.

The robber broke into a parked car of a German motorist and made off with clothing, food and a wallet thought to contain money.

But much to his dismay, there was only a passport in the wallet.

Realizing that a traveler without this important document is in a difficult position, the thief became sympathetic and decided to return to the scene of the crime.

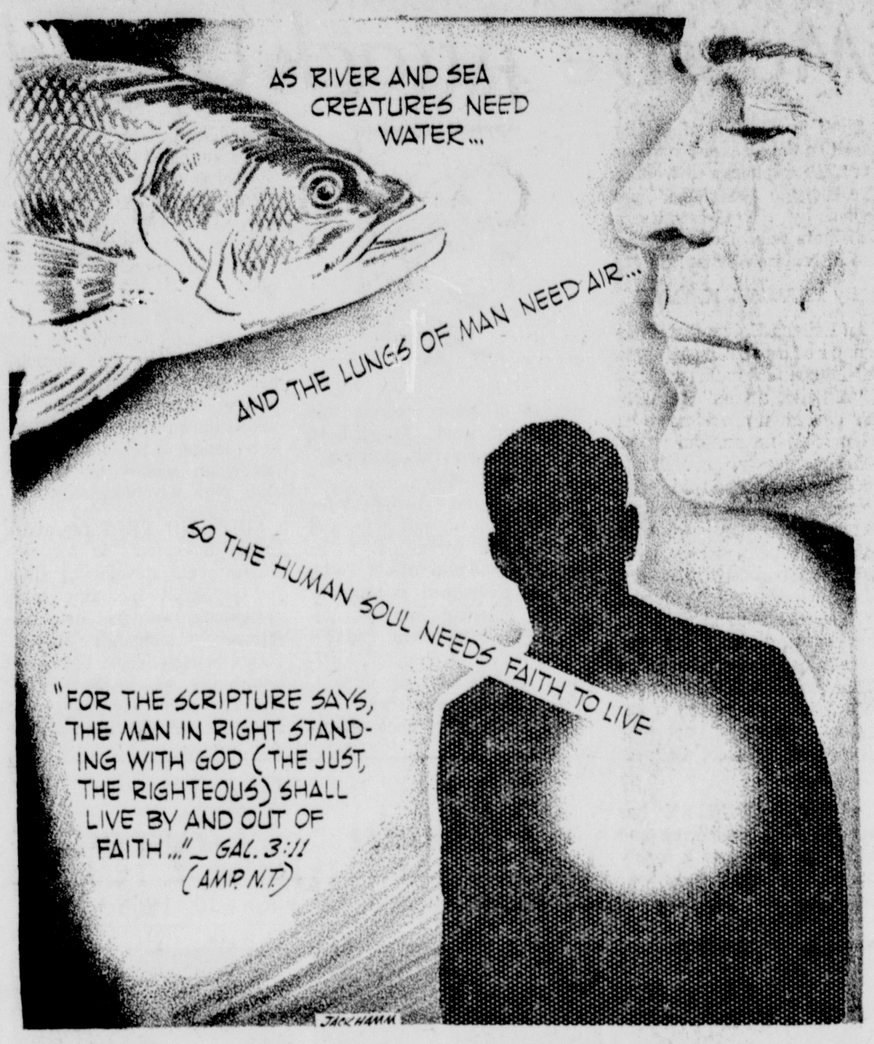

But in his haste to get away undetected, the partially repentant robber made the mistake of putting his own wallet back in the car instead of the stolen one. Police soon tracked him down.

The instinct to be honest is never completely extinguished despite man's failings. God has made the inclination to do good and avoid evil part of our very nature. That's one good reason why there is always hope for the world.

"He who was wont to steal, let him steal no longer." (Ephesians 4:27)

Give me the courage to be honest, O Lord, no matter what the cost.

'Great Society' Only For Bums?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Mr. Johnson has promised to all Americans everything on earth and heaven too, but he forgot to tell us who is going to pay the bills. I am rather interested in learning just how he figures such high planning unless he intends to use the last bit of gold left at Fort Knox.

Perhaps someone can explain this to me. Lower taxes for everyone, or is it true? . . . Just think what the cost of landscaping highways alone would be, then free medical care, free schools, free this, free that, free everything. I don't know about the rest of Americans, as for myself, I don't believe one word of the whole bologna, because if the Administration actually goes through the motions and if at least for one year, such fantastic programs were tried, we would be bankrupt in a very short time. Let us suppose that there were enough billions around to carry on the pipe dreams of the "Great Society," think of the damage such programs would bring to the American public; to teach our children to get things for nothing, to receive handouts, to raise a generation of worthless beings unable to take care of themselves. I still like people with backbone, with dignity and self-respect. The "great society" is good only for bums!

Parking Proposal For San Rafael

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Considering all I have heard of a coin shortage and a solution of same—

I wonder why San Rafael does not mint a token for their parking meters?

These the merchants of San Rafael could distribute to their customers as a token of their appreciation for the patronage that did not escape to Terra Linda or Corte Madera, where they do not have this problem.

Of course, I realize this would amount to a voluntary tax on the merchants rather than an involuntary tax on the consumer.

Look at the upper decks of your new parking lots and all of the cars parked in Terra Linda and Corte Madera that could fill these empty spaces.

Underground Utility Editorial Praised

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial of Jan. 14 on underground utilities certainly was in the finest tradition of the Independent-Journal's objectivity and common sense, and we say, "Bravo!" A voice of clarity and moderation on such a ticklish and complex problem as undergrounding utility wires is welcome indeed. . . .

In most cases there isn't any real physical barrier to undergrounding, although this does exist in certain isolated specific situations. The real problem is simply, "Who's going to pay for it?" Should all of the customers have to bear the burden of increased costs of undergrounding those areas where aesthetic considerations make the users want undergrounding? Should those who enjoy the benefits pay the bill? . . .

. . . We are not opposed to undergrounding in new residential subdivisions, and we do not oppose underground ordinances. . . . We do feel that an underground ordinance for new developments should leave an "out." There should be provision for exceptions at the discretion of city or county planning commissions where underground electric service is not feasible or practical. . . .

Recent changes in technology and materials have made it possible to make available underground service for new subdivisions at greatly reduced cost. . . . In 1960 the cost difference for the electric distribution system in the street was about $600 per lot in our service area; in the first part of 1964 the extra costs of underground were less than $200 per lot in many installations. For a system consisting of surface mounted transformers and underground wires in residential developments, these costs now are $1 per lot front foot plus substructure work performed by the builder. (The costs of street lighting, underground communications and underground service connections to the houses are in addition.)

We are continuing our efforts to reduce underground cost further . . .

Disability Pay Problem Recited

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Having read George E. Fossey's letter, of Fairfax, in the Independent-Journal, about sandbagging practice of the State Compensation Insurance fund to men that have been injured in their work, and being offered a settlement when they are down and unable to work.

My husband was an assistant Chief of the Police in the town of Ross, was injured when the police car went over a bank, and was unable to work for quite awhile. And again while on duty after juveniles was injured falling down steps after turning ankle which brought on a heart attack. Again laid off from work. Doctor said he could not work any longer, and being of the age limit the Town of Ross retired him with no pension.

They waited until he and Asst. Chief Carl Olsen had passed the 65th year, retired them and then took out State insurance for the others. When my husband asked Mayor Fred Allen about getting State insurance, his reply was, "How much money do you have in the bank?"

After 17 years with the town of Ross, 10 years of that being 120 hour weeks, on Nov. 9, 1961, he had the heart attack, while checking juveniles in regard to their bikes. In March, 1962 both the Town and State cut off my husband's pay and compension and we have tried but the state says his condition was not from the fall although he was on duty when the heart attack came and he has not had a well day since.

De Gaulle Only Flamboyant Leader Left—And He Isn't Talking

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the world seems unusually quiet these days, even dull, one reason is that President John F. Kennedy and Premier Nikita Khrushchev were better actors, travelers and talkers than their successors.

With them gone, this has become the era of the technicians in Washington and Moscow. But those two capitals aren't the only places where the sparkle has diminished.

THE PULSE OF the world has slowed down because there is not one truly dramatic figure left, or in sight, to make it skip a beat except for French President Charles de Gaulle, and he's old and he's been playing it cool.

Yet this century has had its share of vivid men, particularly these: Three presidents, Wilson and the two Roosevelts, the Kaiser, Sir Winston Churchill, Lenin, Stalin, Trotsky, Hitler, Mussolini, Gandhi, Nehru.

President Johnson is at his best operating behind the scenes. There's hardly a peep out of the men who took Khrushchev's place.

Kennedy kept American eyes and expectations fixed on the White House if only because his televised news conferences were always a good show: His wit, his gestures, his facial expressions, his sharp intelligence. And there was no end of excitement, even in his first year with his big boner in backing the disastrous Cuban invasion, his trip to Europe, his summit meeting with Khrushchev, his stand on the Berlin wall.

JOHNSON TALKS a lot and even performs a bit, like pulling the Beagle's ears or grabbing tourists' hands, but he is not at his best in speaking or writing. He reportedly bristles when anyone suggests he's corny.

He holds news conferences everywhere—in his office, on the White House lawn, at his ranch, and in his bedroom—but almost all are out of public view because he deliberately avoids news sessions on television.

Johnson has stayed close to home and out of dramatic situations. His tendency has been to soft-pedal, not dramatize, unpleasant events like the riots in Panama last year or the deteriorating war in Viet Nam.

IN THE END he may prove far superior to Kennedy in accomplishments but it seems sure he's not in the same class with Kennedy as an actor.

Just a little over 100 days ago Khrushchev was put in limbo by his Kremlin colleagues. His place was taken by a two-man leadership: Premier Alexei Kosygin and Soviet Community Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev.

They've been practically speechless ever since. The party explained one reason they moved in was because Khrushchev had become too much of a one-man show. They called it a leadership cult.

Kosygin and Brezhnev—compared with the bouncy, flamboyant, sometimes giddy, merry, somber, cheerful, threatening, coaxing cajoling, beguiling and always forceful Khrushchev—are as undramatic as a grocer taking inventory.

DE GAULLE doesn't say much but he's one man who doesn't have to. More than any modern leader he could make a grand spectacle out of silence. If he just leads a parade, with his nose in the air, he can make it look like an expedition against the gates of time.

Harold Wilson, the British prime minister, is no fiery figure, either. He acts like a technician, too. Chiang Kai-shek is still alive but he was always a dead-pan leader.

Red China's Mao Tze-tung is one midcentury man who might have been expected to keep thunder rolling with his pronouncements but he has stayed in the background, letting his aides do most of the talking.

BARKER ON CHINA

Peking Review Can Tip China's Hand

A careful reading of China's number one propaganda magazine, Peking Review, often tips China's hand a week or so before she acts.

FOR EXAMPLE, this bit of choice invective from the Jan. 10 issue of People's Daily and reprinted in the Jan. 15 issue of Peking Review should have given our State Department ample warning that Jakarta and Peking intend to set up a rival Red U.N. to include North Korea, North Viet Nam and any African nations they can induce to join, as well as that crumb of the Balkans, Albania:

"They describe the U.N. as an effective organ in safeguarding world peace. In fact, the U.N. has never played any positive role in this respect. The United Nations is described as the protector of the sovereignty and security of all countries of the world, particularly the small countries, as if disaster would immediately befall any country which withdrew from it.

"AS A MATTER of fact, the United Nations has degenerated into a dirty, international political stock exchange in the grip of a few big powers. The sovereignty of other nations, particularly of the small ones, is bought and sold there by them like shares.

"Now, by withdrawing from the U.N., it (Indonesia) has again pushed the anti-imperialist struggle of its own people and of all African and Asian peoples a big step forward. This is a new, major contribution made by the Indonesian people to the anti-imperialist cause."

Most of the magazine was devoted to lauding Indonesia's decision. Intended for the "true believer," it does not attempt to woo the non-believer with subtlety, as does Russian propaganda. It is an indoctrination sheet which harps on one theme to the point of boredom — namely, that the number one enemy of the people of the world is U.S. imperialism. This it does blatantly and often with considerable peasant vulgarity.

FOR EXAMPLE, this same editorial, when it speaks of the seating of Malaysia on the U.N. Security Council, says, "This is like defecating on someone's head while pointing a dagger at his throat." I've thought about this and decided it would be quite a trick.

This same issue had an article about President Johnson's State of the Union message, titled "Chanting Pious Phrases While Sharpening His Sword." It was loaded with Red cliches.

THERE WAS ALSO a note that Chairman Mao had talked with the American writer, Edgar Snow, on Jan. 9. This probably means another volume on China by Snow this fall. We only hope he has learned there is some virtue in brevity. Another book of 800 pages would about cook Snow with me.

Airmailed weekly from China and only five days en route, Peking Review is crude, venomous and cliche-ridden, but not exactly dull. I try to imagine what my thinking would be if this and similar publications constituted my sole reading matter. It is a bit frightening to contemplate.

SALES BRISK BUT NOT BUSTLING

Moscow Is Trying To Get Rid Of Heavy Stocks In Stores

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

MOSCOW (UPI) — Westerners are used to the delights of winter sales. Now Soviet shoppers are getting a taste of them for the first time.

The novelty begins with a huge sign that decorates a select number of stores in this snowy capital.

It says simply: "Sale of goods at lowered prices."

These days the sign has a double meaning. It means a pretty fair deal for the consumer and the best of a bad deal for the state.

For this is not just a sale to get rid of high-quality, useful, elegant surplus goods.

This is a sale—going on throughout the country—to get rid of unsold goods valued at more than the fabulous sum of $2 billion.

They didn't sell at the old prices because they were overpriced, or badly designed or out of fashion.

The new Kremlin regime has decided the time has come to do something about this huge excess whose total value is equivalent to 2 per cent of the nation's annual budget.

On the one hand, they have slashed the prices in hopes of selling off the goods. On the other, they have begun a drive to improve the nation's consumer goods industry.

How has it worked?

In the cut-rate department of Moscow's central market, which this correspondent visited, business was brisk. But it lacked the mad bustle of so many sales in New York or London.

"We have been selling at these lowered prices for more than two months," said one black-uniformed sales girl.

"And I would say we have been selling well.

"We don't have any great reserves here and when we run low, they send us more goods to sell off.

"You know, there are several department stores in Moscow that are doing the same. There is GUM, the central department store, there's the Moskva department store, others."

The cut-rate department was stocked mainly with cameras, radios, dresses, leather goods, neckties and a very wide assortment of textiles.

Customers were craning over the glass counters, examining goods from every angle. Some goods were obviously better than others.

Shoes were probably the least elegant wares. Especially the women's shoes. Prices of plain ones with clumsy heels were slashed from $25.96 to $19.80. Those formerly selling for $12.32 went down to $7.70.

Heavy woolen material was cut from $44 a meter (39 inches) to $30.80. Some of the lighter printed fabrics like rayon were priced at $4.40 down from $5.83.

A selection of multicolored, striped ties—which were not getting many bids—were laid out in a circle on a table at about 33 cents apiece.

Leather bags, including a number of nicely turned-out pig skin ones, were selling for as little as $4.40 down from $8 or $17.60 down from $20.

All this is definitely interesting to the worker whose average wage is about $110 a month.

GOP Hopes Elections Will Be Party Topic

Republicans Will Look For Signs Of Weakness In LBJ's Great Society

By JULES WITCOVER
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders looking to the 1966 congressional elections as a tonic for shattered party morale are staking their hopes on the American tradition for a strong two-party system.

They hope between now and the 1966 campaign to persuade the American people that predominance by one party is politically unhealthy and leads to excesses.

In this effort, the Republicans candidly are relying on President Johnson and his ambitious Great Society to provide the ammunition for the GOP campaign.

Republican workers came away from their national committee's unity meeting in Chicago last weekend armed with encouraging statistics about Republican prospects for 1966.

Sen. Thurston Morton of Kentucky, chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee, ticked off figures that showed graphically how the presidential candidacy of Barry Goldwater pulled down Republican senatorial and gubernatorial candidates who ran well ahead of him.

Rep. Bob Wilson of California, head of the GOP congressional campaign committee, noted that Democrats won 62 house seats by less than 5 per cent of the vote, and that 42 of these were won by less than 3 per cent. By contrast, only 49 Republican seats are in the 5 per cent "marginal" category.

Wilson's figures are more hopeful than Morton's. The reason is that all 62 marginal seats in the House are up for election in 1966.

In the Senate, only 33 seats will be at stake, 14 of them Republican and 19 Democratic. Of the 19 Democratic, seven are in supposedly "safe" Deep South states, which means the GOP must risk 14 while hoping to pick up some of the remaining 12 Democratic seats.

One of the underemphasized Republican debacles of Nov. 3—Morton calls it "one of the collateral tragedies of 1964"—was the GOP's failure to capitalize on a golden opportunity to cut deeply into the Democratic majority in the Senate.

Of the 35 Senate seats contested, 26 were Democratic. Republicans managed to pick up only one of the 26—in California by George Murphy. Three of the nine GOP seats were lost—Kenneth B. Keating's in New York, J. Glenn Beall's in Maryland and Edwin L. Mechem's in New Mexico.

If the average Republican vote nationally had been raised four and one-half per cent, according to Morton, the GOP would have picked up nine more Republican seats in the Senate, where the Democrats now enjoy a 68-32 edge.

SEN. THRUSTON B. MORTON
Gives party warning

Republicans probably heard more talk at their Chicago meeting about the desirability of the two-party system than has been aired at a one-party session in years. And history shows that there is more than wishful thinking in the recovery powers of a badly beaten party and there is much evidence that the American people in fact like to keep both parties strong.

In 1936 the defeat of Republican candidate Alfred M. Landon cut GOP strength to 89 seats in the House. In the very next congressional election, in 1938, the voters raised this number to 169.

A factor in this recovery is said to have been public disfavor with President Roosevelt's 1937 effort to increase the size of the Supreme Court. Republicans are hoping that Johnson's present 195-140 Democratic margin in the house will lead him to try some similar power move that will displease voters.

Johnson, however, was in Congress himself at the time of the so-called court-packing attempt and he has shown no disposition to precipitate either public or congressional ire by overt strong-arm tactics.

Even with Goldwater off the ballot in 1966, Republicans know they still have a major rebuilding job in the area of the Negro vote if they are to benefit from the American desire for a strong two-party system.

But now to win back some of this vote was a question that went unanswered in Chicago. Though there was much talk about the need to sell "the party of Lincoln" to Negroes, not a single promising idea was offered on how this could be done.

A new group called the National Negro Republican Assembly proposed that more Negroes be brought into party activities, but the recommendations were not discussed. The retiring party chairman, Dean Burch, promised only to review them with his successor, Ray Bliss of Ohio, and with members of the Republican National Committee.

Gov. Brown's Welfare Budget Is Enough To Run Most States

By BILL BOYARSKY

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Illness, poverty and the tribulations of old age boosted Gov. Brown's request for state and federal health and welfare funds this year to $1.27 billion—enough to run most states.

It will go for mental hospitals, close-to-home care for the mentally ill and retarded, food-and-clothing money for fatherless families and to meet the many needs of the elderly, the blind and the deaf.

A total of $705,491,000 would come from the state's General Fund, 13.9 per cent more than last year.

In addition, counties will chip in their share—but the Finance Department hasn't yet computed how much.

In every field, spending is up from last year.

The Social Welfare Department—with its massive aid programs for the aged, the disabled and the poor—will take the biggest share of welfare money.

The General Fund, Brown said, will contribute $450,609,106 and the federal government will add another $522,227,757.

Statistics tell why.

The controversial Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program will be tending to 590,900 families—10.7 per cent more than last year — the governor said.

And to complicate the picture, the state learned this year's expenditure will be $367.4 million —$16.3 million more than expected when the budget was passed.

The needy disabled case load will amound to 99,540. compared to 81,165 at the end of the present fiscal year. There will be an estimated 278,970 people in the Old Age Security pension program at the end of the 1965-66 fiscal year.

And the Medical Assistance to the Aged program will pay long-term medical expenses of 33,070 old folks by the end of the year—20.4 per cent more than this year.

The Public Health Department Brown said, will need $15,468,266 for operations, and $56 million for local assistance. The Department of Rehabilitation will need $22,539,864.

The complexities of an urban society in a once-pastoral state are reflected in the $184,159,355 requested just to keep the Mental Hygiene Department's vast system of hospitals, out-patient clinics and other facilities operating.

Another $57,713,330 will be needed for new buildings and $15,711,727 for assistance to counties. Brown also plans to seek $2.5 million to begin a new program of care near home communities for the retarded.

BLISTERS OF WAR

World Has 8 Million D. P.s Today

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Just 20 years ago Allied armies were closing in on the German heartland and squeezing out into the open those fever blisters of war, the refugees.

Two decades later, the face of the earth is still pocked with these fever blisters.

The U. S. Committee for Refugees puts the total today at nearly 8 million, dispersed in nearly 50 countries in every continent.

In early 1945 the D.P.s — displaced persons—poured from camps where the enemy had taken them. The little people of France and the Low Countries, the Slavs and the Greeks and those from the Balkans, all brought to Germany as slave labor. There were Jews and others, from Germany and elsewhere, liberated from extermination camps by Americans, British and French troops.

Most Germans made it home to the rubble left by war. The others had to wait. But organization finally came in the form of the First International Refugee Organization (IRO). Later it was the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM), and finally the United Nations, which appointed a high commissioner to take over the work of the IRO. Voluntary church and charity groups assisted in this work.

The success of this effort is measured by the fact that ICEM has resettled about 1.3 million European refugees since 1952. Only a few thousand hard-core cases—aged and ailing—remain to be cared for.

With them, however, have grown up two new groups looking for a new life somewhere else in the world — the recent refugee—escapees and the families of breadwinners who had emigrated on their own years ago.

ICEM had a budget of 21.6 million dollars in 1964 for transporting and resettling 70,500 migrants, about 33,000 of them classified as refugees.

The U. N. High Commissioner for Refugees, working with the ICEM, has found new homes for 32,793 refugees since 1951, but still has 30,200 refugees, of whom 1,900 were still in camps at the beginning of 1964.

Meantime, he was plagued with the problem of 150,000 refugees from Rwanda who had streamed into Burundi and the Congo; with the fate of 1.5 million refugees from Red China in Hong Kong; another million from North Korea in South Korea, and more than 2 million in Indian from East Pakistan and Tibet.

The High Commissioner also works with the United States and Latin American government in dealing with the problems of Cuban refugees. Between January 1961 and March 1964, more than 172,000 Cubans fleeing Castro had registered at the Cuban Refugee Center in Miami.

The Palestine refugee problem, with more than 1 million displaced persons in camps and towns of four Arab countries, is handled by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA).

Financing of all these programs is by voluntary contributions. Nearly 50 religious, welfare and charity organizations in the United States contribute heavily. The United States government has poured more than 705 million dollars into the United Nations and various international governmental organizations.

Still, refugees are scattered across the world.

Ailing Johnson Has Active Week

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Though confined to his sickbed, first in Bethesda Naval Hospital and then at the White House, President Lyndon B. Johnson had an active week.

The president began the first week of his new term by sending to Congress the administration's budget requests for $99.7 billion for the year beginning July 1.

Top dollars went for defense, but the pillars of his domestic social program—health, education, housing and the anti-poverty drive—were well provided for in the highest budget request in the nation's history.

Later in the week, the president sent to Congress his economic forecast, predicting another year of prosperity for the nation. As the longest peacetime economic upswing continued, a number of the nation's largest corporations reported high, if not record, earnings for 1964.

General Motors reported 1964 earnings of $1.73 billion, highest profits of any corporation in history.

Johnson, who was pronounced by his doctors to be too ill to attend the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill in London, continued a slow but steady recovery from a bad cold and respiratory complications. The illness gave impetus to thoughts about presidential succession, however, and at week's end Johnson asked Congress for a Constitutional amendment covering presidential disability and filling vacancies in the office of vice president.

The president also enabled acting Atty. Gen. Nicholas De B. Katzenbach to drop the "acting" by naming the former aide to now Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to the cabinet post without qualification.

Johnson dispatched Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Chief Justice Earl Warren, and ambassador to Britain David K. E. Bruce as the official American delegation to Churchill's state funeral. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower also attended.

Saigon—Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, South Viet Nam's in-again, out-again military strong man, was in again this week, overturning the civilian government of Tran Van Houng.

Air Force Academy, Colo. — An examination cheating scandal continued to grow at the Air Force Academy. By week's end, 93 cadets had resigned.

New Orleans — New Orleans and Mobile longshoremen voted to accept a four-year contract which earlier had been approved by dock workers in New York and New England.

Portland, Ore. — Floods resulting from heavy rains and melting snow left 1,000 homeless in the Pacific Northwest although the flooding appeared less serious than that of a month earlier in the same area.

FREE PARKING NEAR BUS DEPOT WILL END MONDAY

Free parking on state-owned property near the Greyhound Bus depot at Third Street and Tamalpais Avenue in San Rafael will end Monday when construction for the new freeway interchange will start.

San Rafael police, in cooperation with the State Division of Highways, will issue citations and tow away cars parked on the former Henry Hess Lumber Co. property, according to Sgt. Raymond F. Bleasdale, who heads the police traffic division.

"Notices that parking will not be allowed in the area were placed on about 100 cars yesterday," he said, "Commuters and others using the lot will be directed to the city's all-day parking lot on Lincoln Avenue, south of Second Street, Monday."

Bleasdale said there would be no change in the traffic pattern in the area until July.

New Political Party Forced To Change Name By State

A new political party, launched by a Larkspur conservative, has been forced to change its official name to the New Conservative Party.

Frederick L. Ullner of 467 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur, applied this week to Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan to reserve the name "National Conservative Party."

Ullner said this was approved by a senior counsel in Jordan's office. But on Wednesday, he received a letter from the secretary of state saying the name was too similar to the Conservative Party, Inc., formed in Los Angeles in 1952.

Ullner negotiated with the secretary of state and agreed to the "New Conservative Party."

"We are going to be the people's conservative party," said Ullner. "We feel the Republican Party, including most of its top people, are entirely out of touch with the people. The Republican higher-ups are concerned mainly with social doings among themselves and occasionally throw bones to the common people. That's not enough."

Ullner said a third party is needed because "we feel it is much easier to create a new image than to re-shape the old one."

Car Hits Rocks; Demolished

A 20-year-old San Rafael woman was only slightly injured but the car she was driving on foggy Point San Pedro Road was demolished when it ran onto rocks alongside the bay at 5 a.m. yesterday.

Julie Ann Jacobi, daughter of William Jacobi, 1426 Lincoln Avenue, told San Rafael police she lost control of the borrowed 1946 Plymouth sedan on a curve, and drove onto large rocks between the road and the water, near Knight Drive. Miss Jacobi was treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts and bruises of both knees.

The auto belonged to Bonnie Jean Bishop, 124 Ross Street, San Rafael, police said.

Novato High Contract Is Awarded

M. Royce Hall of Napa, low bidder at $421,654, was awarded a contract last night to build additions to Novato High School.

Seven bids were received by the old Novato Unified School District.

Hall had been low bidder in an earlier bid opening on Dec. 7, at $565,000, but architect Richard Banwell discovered a mistake had been made in the amount of money available for the job. All bids were therefore rejected and the plans scaled down.

The X-ray tube, costing about $1,000, has worn out and must be replaced, the health department announced today.

History of a Planned Community — MARINCELLO

(Because the decisions regarding Marincello have long range significance for every resident of Marin County, these decisions should be based on honest appraisal of facts. The Frouge Corp. offers this background information to enable fair-minded Marinites to reach their own conclusions.)

A new community is being planned for a hidden valley on 2,138 acres of land north of the Golden Gate headlands and west of Highway 101. Designed for Marin County living, it will accommodate approximately 25,000 people when it is fully completed 15 years from now.

Some 180,000 people live in Marin County today, and according to a study by the County Planning Dept. this will increase to 295,000 by 1980. Less conservative estimates predict a much larger increase in population, and a Livingstone and Blayney Market Study estimates more than 400,000 people in Marin by 1980.

Marincello, therefore, will house only 25 per cent or less of the natural increase in the population of the County. The land occupied by Marincello—privately owned for the past 300 years—has never been, and is not now, under consideration by Federal, State or County governments for public use as a park.

A planning team, composed of professional planners and civic leaders, has conceived this conservatively planned community with the deepest respect for Marin County's true traditions, preserving the scenic beauties and natural resources of the site.

Market Study

A Master Plan of this new community was prepared and will be submitted to the Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors for approval.

To enable the reader to form his own opinion about Marincello, a history of the planning is described here, giving the pertinent facts as they occured:

A market study by the San Francisco firm of Livingston and Blayney, associated with the Seattle firm of Larry Smith and Co., was made in 1961 to determine how the site should be developed. These investigations concluded that the area of Marincello is suitable for a planned community which would support 50,000 people, approximately double the amount now being proposed for Marincello when it is completed.

A team of consultants and planners was organized to prepare a Master Plan for the develpment of the land.

Mrs. Vera Schultz was asked to participate in the planning to advise the professional members of the team on Marin County's special needs and traditions. In accepting this role, she reserved her right to withdraw or publicly object to the plan or any portion of it if, in her opinion, it did not serve the best interests of the County.

"After spending much time studying the plan and the area, I am convinced that Marincello as proposed can be an asset to Marin County, esthetically, psycologically and financially," she says. "It would be in the best interests of Marin County, and especially the schools of Marin, if Marincello were approved and started."

The San Francisco firm of Reid and Tarics, nationally known architects and engineers, was selected to prepare the Master Plan. They in turn associated with Okamoto and Liskamm, architects and planners of San Francisco.

Professors on Team

Other professional firms were selected to solve specific technical problems in connection with water, sewer, drainage, etc.

The team was reinforced by Martin Meyerson, then Dean of the College of Environmental Design at the University of California, Berkeley, who was a special consultant on planning and urban design at the very early stages of the development of the plan.

Later, Professor Sherman Maisel fo the School of Business Administration at the University of California joined the team. His role was to investigate the effect of the Marincello development on the Marin County tax base.

Among the major considerations that confronted the planning team were access to the property, the traffic problem on Highway 101 and the Golden Gate Bridge, weather conditions at the site, population trends in the future growth of Marin County, and a self-supporting status so that it would not be a burden on the rest of the county.

After studying a variety of planning ideas with these considerations in mind, the plan which is now being proposed emerged. This was a plan for residential, commercial, light industrial and civic facilities with adequate opportunities within the community for those who desire to live and work there.

3 Commercial Uses

Three commercial uses of land are incorporated in the Marincello plan—tourist facilities, office buildings and clean, light industry.

The State Department of Beaches and Parks projects a total of two to three million visitors annually to the vast public recreation area around Marincello. Commercial areas along the boundaries of Marincello adjacent to the park would respond to the needs of these visitors by providing facilities which are not permitted in the park.

The Marin County Visitors Bureau claims several hundred conventions could be attracted to Marincello every year, each with from 200 to 800 visitors, if proper facilities were provided. It was indicated that Marin County could now sustain one major hotel which was accessible from Highway 101, and could economically accommodate two major hotels if convention facilities were built. Hundreds of specialized personnel would be required to service a tourist industry such as this.

Large brokerage houses in San Francisco were interviewed for recommendations on how to bring secondary, auxiliary office users to Marincello. Well-designed offices and reasonable rental costs, plus housing, recreation and service facilities for the employees were established as requirements. Marincello will provide all of these.

The low rental is possible partly because of the great difference between Marincello and downtown San Francisco in the cost of land, and partly in the savings to be gained by continuous construction by an experience, knowledgeable, well-financed firm.

A portion of the land in Marincello is planned for clean light industrial uses. There are large areas set aside at present in Marin County for such purposes, but these have not attracted industry because they are either undeveloped lowlands whose development costs would be extremely high, or they are already developed and very expensive.

As an example, a one-acre industrial site in one of the present subdivisions in Marin now costs more than $200,00.

In addition, there is lack of proper residential developments adjacent to this industrial land to provide a necessary labor force to serve the industries.

Jobs for Residents

With this type of development, where there would be jobs for many residents of Marincello in Marincello, the opportunity is presented to keep a portion of the additional population growth off the major highways and the Golden Gate Bridge, because these people would not be commuters.

The land is divided into three classes of residential use—single family homes, garden apartments, and high-rise apartments. A portion of the land is planned for retail business comparable to Marin County's C-1 zoning, while other portions are set aside for general commercial comparable to C-2 zoning and light industrial use, where industrial users would have to meet strict performance standards to be approved by the county.

A dominant feature of the overall planning was the large scale application to the residential areas of the cluster development principle, which has been approved and endorsed by the American Conservation Assn.

Large areas of green space within the community will be retained for a variety of community uses available and adjacent to all sites. Land coverage will be much lower than in the average conventional Marin County development not built on the cluster principle.

The high density residential area, limited to 16-story apartment buildings, will have a land coverage of only four per cent. These apartment buildings are placed in groups of four to six following the natural topography of the land around garages whose roofs will be landscaped as useable open space. The 400 to 1,500 feet of open land between the clusters thus becomes a feature of Marincello and an important environmental asset retaining the natural character of the County.

The alternative to the high-rise clusters was low rise apartments or a mass of single-family homes which would cover 25 per cent or more of the land.

When the Master Plan was sufficiently completed, it was given to Professor Maisel to consider the effect of the Marincello development on the Marin County Tax base. This investigation revealed that when Marincello is finished it will not only be self supporting, but there will be a surplus of approximately $2.7 million in property taxes, exclusive of additional revenues from sales taxes and personal property taxes.

The net effect of such surplus today would be more than an eight per cent reduction in every county tax bill. On the other hand, if the Marincello land were used for a single-family residential development, this would increase every tax bill in the county.

Publicly Owned

The Frouge Corp., of Bridgeport, Conn., and New York, which plans to build Marincello, is publicly owned and has many California share-holders. It has years of construction and building-owner-management experience, and plans to maintain ownership of a great portion of the land with the improvements on it.

Based on an agreement between the Frouge Corp. and the Gulf Oil Company for the development of Marincello, the initial financing for the project is provided by a portion of a long-term $6 million loan recently arranged between the Frouge Corp. and a group of West Coast and Eastern banks, headed by the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, and including the Bank of California and United California Bank.

Marincello is not a typical Marin County development. It cannot be, because it seeks to avoid the economic problems created by many of the existing developments, and these solutions necessarily require the new approach proposed by Marincello.

Marincello is different from any previous planned community here, but Marin itself is changing. Within the past two or three years apartment construction has jumped tremendously; for example, in 1962, 66 per cent of all residential units built in Marin were apartments.

The population boom in the county, which will include the crop of "war babies" who are about to reach adulthood and move into the housing market, and the increased number of older people whose children are grown and who are thus ready for smaller quarters, means a variety of accommodations are needed.

Expected Growth

Approximately 3.7 million Americans will reach 18 years of age in 1964-65; in mid-1965 there will be some 18 million men and women 65 and over in this country, and this figure will jump to 21 million in ten years. Marincello is designed to help Marin accommodate its portion of this amazing growth, since the Livingston and Blayney figures on the expansion of the county in the next 15 years indicate 100,000 or more new residents in Southern Marin alone.

Marin County in its natural state was the most beautiful county in the entire Bay Area. It is the hope of all those who live here that Marin's values will be preserved, and its scenic beauties and natural resources maintained and enhanced as its population grows.

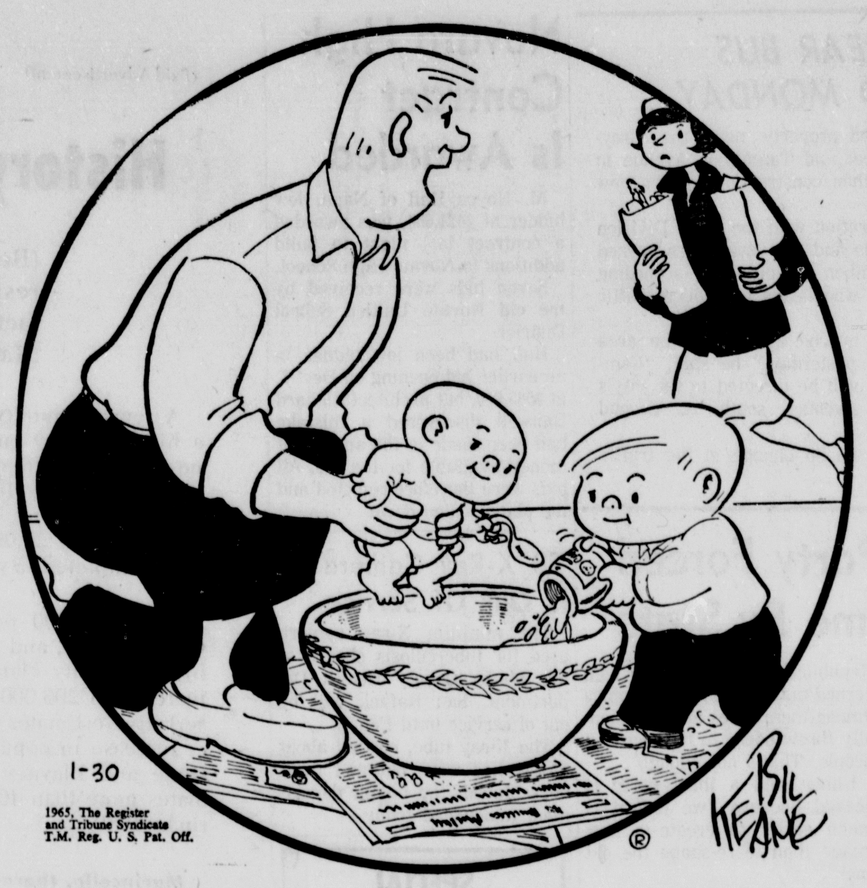

There were many developments in the past which have abundantly fulfilled this promise. Many of the latest developments, however, have not only failed to fulfill this hope, but have violated much of which was once Marin's beauty.

Marin County needs a Master Plan for orderly development in the future, and Marincello, as an isolated, self-contained, economically sound community, can become one of the larger "clusters" in this Master Plan. When it is built as planned, with its lagoons, parkways and slender towers, with more open space and greenery among them than within any existing development in the county, Marincello will set higher standards for future local developments.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Responder Needs Little After Opening Notrump

When your partner opens with one notrump you jump to four hearts or four spades to show a game-going hand with no interest in a slam.

When you have an interest in a slam you usually jump to three of your long suit rather than to game.

Opening lead — ♣ 10

South could afford to bid game even though he had only 7 points in high cards. He knew that his partner had 16 to 18 points, with balanced distribution.

COMBINED STRENGTH

The combined strength might be a point or two short of the 26 points usually needed for game, but South's six-card suit would make up for a point or two.

Even after bidding the hand properly South still had to find the right line of play. He could not afford to try the club finesse at the first trick.

East would gladly win with the king of clubs, cash two high diamonds, and give West a diamond ruff.

REFUSES FINESSE

South can virtually assure the contract by playing dummy's ace of clubs at the first trick.

The best play at the second trick is the ace of hearts since South cannot afford to try a heart finesse. If the king of hearts happens to fall on the ace, South will have an easy time.

The heart king does not fall, but South runs three spades safely to discard a diamond from his hand.

LEADS HEART

Then he leads a heart to give up a trick to the king. The defenders can then get one club and one diamond.

South would make an overtrick if he tried the heart finesse, but he would go down if the finesse lost.

The best chance is to get rid of a diamond before allowing the defenders to get their two diamond tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one notrump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:

◇ A K 10 9 3
♣ K 5 4

What do you say?

Answer: Bid three notrump.

Since you have 10 points, the combined count should be 26 to 28 points in high cards. This should be enough for nine tricks at notrump but may not be enough for eleven tricks at diamonds.

PERMANENT GUESTS — It's not bats in the belfry but raccoons in the attic of the Pieter de Vries home in Mill Valley. The unwanted boarders become active every spring and the de Vries family is preparing for another noisy season. (Independent-Journal drawing by Jack Lucy)

Unwelcomed Guests Living In The Attic

Spring is on its way and this is rather frightening to the Pieter de Vries family of Mill Valley because it means another litter of raccoons in the attic.

As the de Vries were unpacking after they bought their three-gable house at 2 Lincoln Avenue two and one-half years ago, Mrs. de Vries heard strange noises upstairs.

"Just cats," said de Vries.

"For a long time we thought they were cats, but pretty big ones," said Mrs. de Vries.

Last April the animals had a litter and an exterminator was called who diagnosed: "Raccoons."

"No exterminator would relieve us of them," Mrs. de Vries related. The Humane Society suggested a trap. "But this did not work because the raccoons don't eat here. They eat at the neighbors."

Someone suggested sulphur candles but de Vries, a doctor, said sulphur is toxic.

"They are ruining the ceiling in the girls' bedroom," said Mrs. de Vries. "As I lie in bed I think of them. You can hear them scratching fleas. They are very noisy. They kind of squeal and play. They tumble around. I have never seen them but the dogs bark at them. They go out about 8 p.m. and come back about 2 or 3 in the morning. I always hear them come in.

"Sometimes when we have company for dinner we can hear them chewing in the corner over the dining room. I wonder if they are chewing on light cords."

Mrs. de Vries suggested they take the roof off but her husband was not in accord.

Despairingly, she says, "We're going to have another litter up there pretty soon."

'Mein Kampf' Tonight

"Mein Kampf," a film documentary of the Nazi era of Germany, will be shown by the College of Marin Art Club at 8 p.m. today in Olney Hall on the campus. Also to be shown is a short subject, "Variations on a Theme," a statement against war.

Negro Culture, History Outlined

"Aren't you (Negroes) close to achieving what you want?"

"Haven't the civil rights laws changed conditions for Negroes?"

"Now we have civil rights and the anti-poverty bills, don't you think civil rights movements will slow down?"

To these three questions asked by teachers yesterday at the Sausalito School District Teacher's Institute at Richardson Bay School, Harold B. Brooks Jr. replied, "No."

Brooks, consultant, Negro American Labor Council, San Francisco, said the laws are "a means to a change providing society starts to implement and abide by these laws."

He said he thinks civil rights activities will be "stepped up" and said, "if people do not become active, the anti-poverty bill will not be any benefit to people it is supposed to help."

Brooks, a native of Mitchell, S.D., where he said there were but two Negro families, was one of four speakers on Negro history. His subject: "Negro History and Culture."

He cited that, contrary to popular belief, the Negro did not submit meekly in coming from Africa to America as a slave. He said slave ships had large nets built out from their sides to keep Negroes from jumping into the sea. They would rather die than leave their homes, he said.

He named important Negroes in American history and their fields, including poets, writers, inventors, singers, educators. Among them are Phyllis Wheatley, Ira Aldrich, Paul Robeson, Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver, Robert Small, Dr. Ralphe Bunche, Granville T. Woods, Elijah McCoy, Dr. Hale Williams, Joe Louis, Adam Clayton Powell and writers Lomax, Kelly and Baldwin.

Questioned on how teachers could "get through" better to Negro pupils, he suggested that youngsters be permitted to write book reports on people of their ethnic groups. He also suggested that teachers become "involved" in volunteer work, such as the Parent-Teacher Assn. or a civic group in the community, to get to know the families of the students.

Greenbrae Boy Admits Burglary

A 14-year-old Greenbrae boy Thursday night admitted to Corte Madera police that he had been involved in a burglary Oct. 25 of the canteen at Redwood High School which netted $276.30 from a cashbox.

He said he received only $60 for his share of the work. He was cited to appear in juvenile court Feb. 11.

Police said the boy was named by a 17-year-old Corte Madera boy arrested Saturday by Larkspur police and charged with entering two homes in Larkspur seeking money to pay his probation officer for restitution on previous crimes.

They said entry was made to the canteen by slipping the lock with a pocket knife. A padlock on a refrigerator was forced to reach the cashbox inside.

Tars 'Sloppy' But Romp To 15th Straight, 94-62

College of Marin's basketball team will be going after its 16th straight triumph tonight in Kentfield after having an easy time of it last night rolling to 15 in a row.

Last night College of Siskiyous was added to Marin's list as the Tars bombed the visiting cagers 94-62 in Kentfield. Tonight it will be Shasta at 8 o'clock in the Tars' gymnasium.

Marin is now 4-0 in Golden Valley Conference play and Siskiyous fell to 2-2. The Tars' overall record is a sparkling 17-2.

"Our ball handling was sloppy and we showed signs of our layoff," said Marin coach Cal Riemcke after last night's game. (Teams in the conference were idle for two weeks for final examinations.) "We were a little over anxious."

It's hard to call 94 points "sloppy" but that goes to show what this year's Marin team is capable of doing.

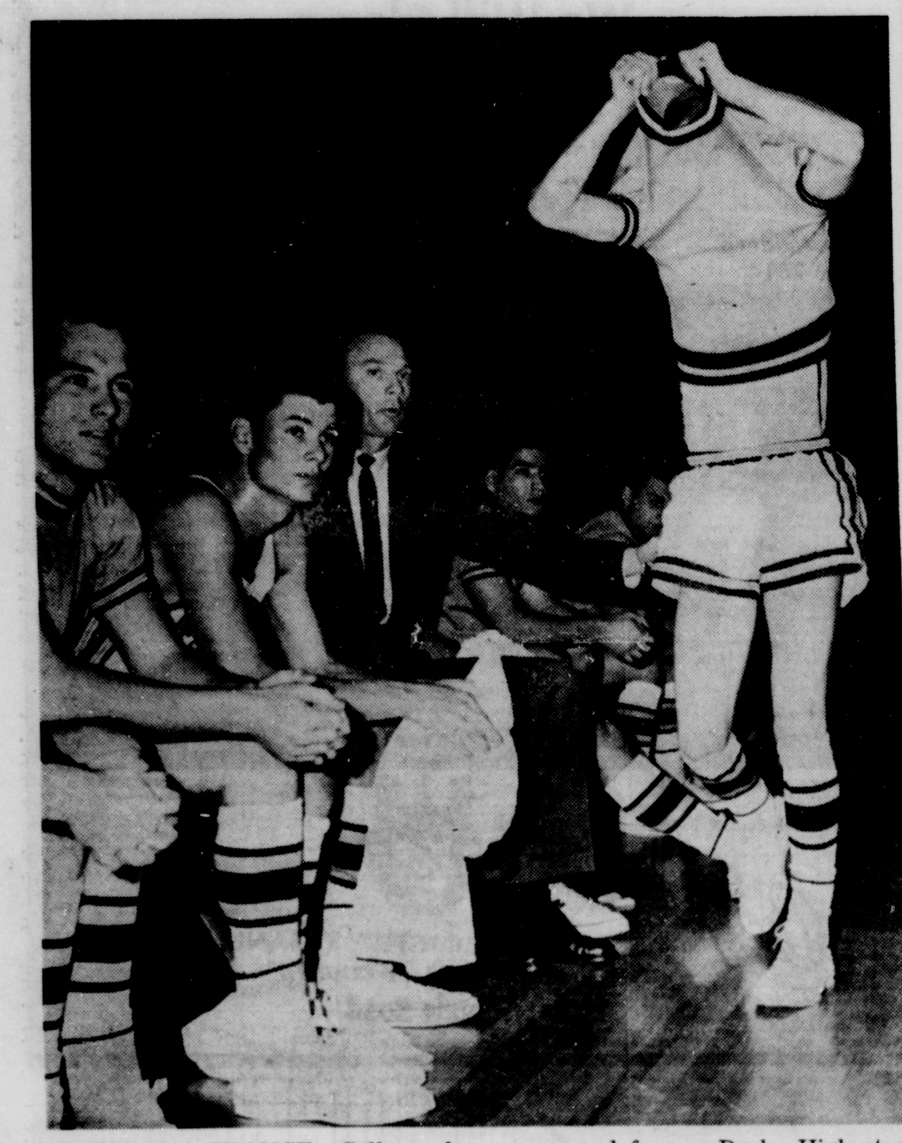

Siskiyous got off to a 4-2 lead, but then Marin racked up 11 straight points to go in front by 13-4. The Tars never looked back and by half had a lead of 54-35. All 15 Marin cagers played and 10 of them made the scoring column. Five were in double figures to give you an idea of their balance.

Receiving the praise of Riemcke was center Jim Halm who led the game in both points and rebounds, 21 and 15 respectively. "He played an outstanding game," were the words of his coach. Also praised was Brad Busch, the Marin guard who will be finishing out his College of Marin basketball career tonight. He connected on nine buckets for 18 points last night. Other Marin rebounding was handled by forwards Fred Arnold (9) and Bill Brody (13).

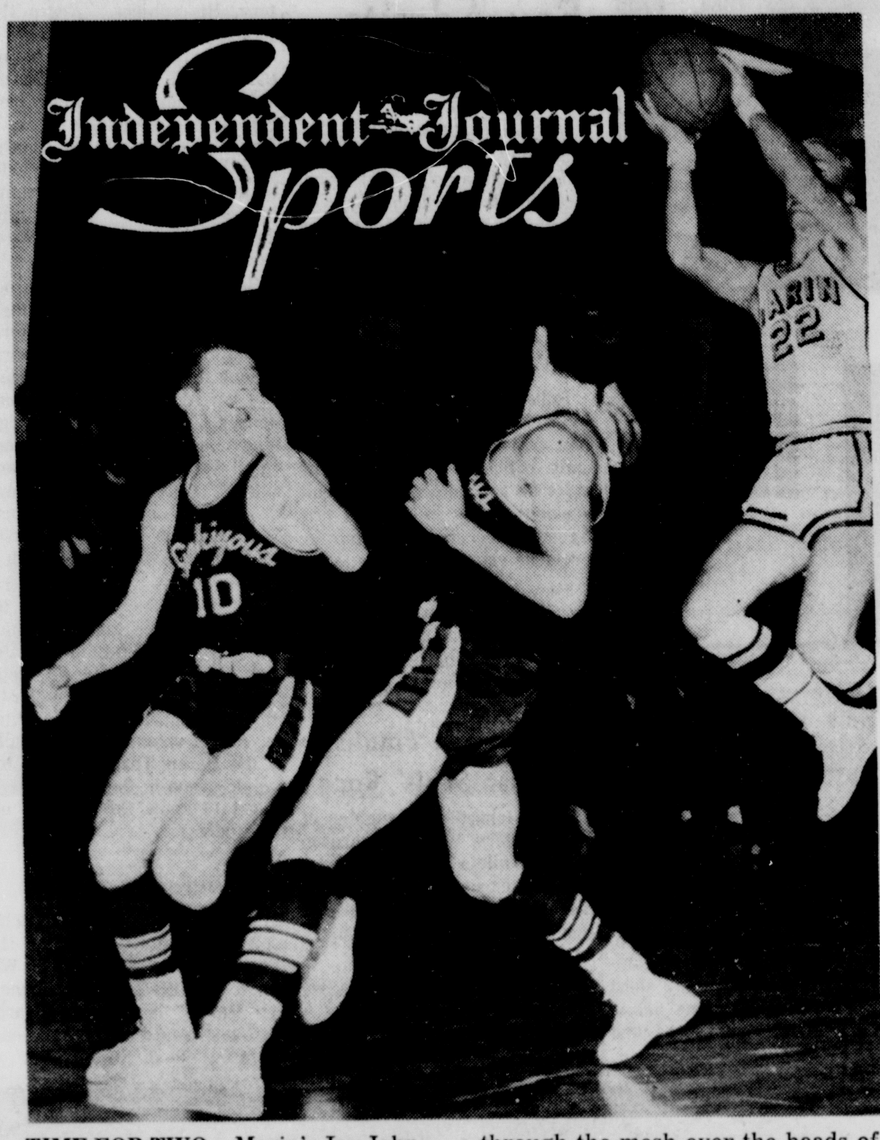

Siskiyous also got some evenly-balanced scoring from George Corder with 12; Bill Duchi, 11; Bob Corson, 10, and Gene Landoe, 10.

Marin outrebounded its foes 67-49. From the free throw line, Marin made 14 of 20 for 70 per cent and Siskiyou had 14 of 22 for 64 per cent. Halm made good on all seven of his charity tosses.

Shasta's leading scorer, 6-5 Russ Osborne, an all-conference forward, is in the same boat as Busch, as his eligibility runs out tonight also. So that should be a good duel between the two all-conference stars.

TIME FOR TWO—Marin's Jay Johnson (22) leaps high on a fast break early in game to pump two points through the mesh over the heads of Siskiyou's players George Corder (10) and Bill Duch. (Independent-Journal photos by Al Sims)

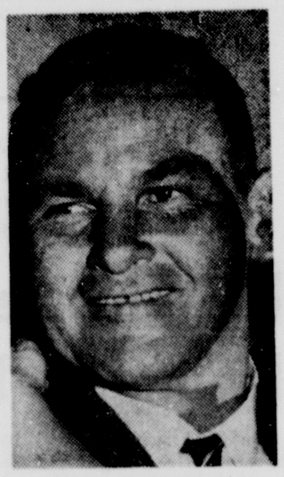

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Pigskin Season Never Ends For Marin's Mister Football

One of the coaches in attendance at the Sports Injury Conference in San Rafael today was Redwood High's Bob Troppmann. You may have spotted him. The one with the football on his neck. Well, not really. Bob's noggin only slightly resembles an oblate spheroid because he eats, drinks and sleeps football.

In fact, his wife's afraid to ask him to pass the butter. Breaks more windows that way. And she cringes every time he shaves; afraid he'll pop. It's also rumored he wears a raccoon coat for pajamas — complete with chrysanthemums.

BOB TROPPMANN

Tropp spends more time on football than anyone I know. I went to a baseball game with him one day and became confused when he kept hollering, "Kick, kick." He thinks Orlando Cepeda wears shoulder pads.

If you get the impression Robert J. Troppmann is a football nut you're right. And right now in these non-football days, when we're laughing at the Warriors and getting ready for baseball, he's up to here in pigskin projects.

FIRST ON the agenda is his role as manager for the Kodak Coach of the Year Clinic in San Francisco Feb. 12-13. To this, some of the greatest coaches in the land are coming to the Jack Tar Hotel, including Clark Shaughnessy, Tommy Prothro, Glenn Dobbs Jr., Frank Broyles, Ara Parseghian, Bud Wilkinson, Duffy Daugherty, Ray Willsey, John Ralston and a long line of glittering etceteras.

The two-day affair, expected to attract 1,000 coaches from throughout the land, has enjoyed smashing success in the past few years under the Corte Maderan's management, and this one should be no exception.

WHEN MARIN'S Mr. Football finishes with his big S.F. task, his attention will return to home soil where on March 6 his special "baby," the 11th annual Redwood Football Clinic, will take place. Tropp started this at Drake High and switched it to Redwood when he moved there in 1958. In 10 years the clinics have attracted more than 3,500 coaches.

This year's agenda, expected to draw some 400 mentors, again will feature talks by Northern California's top prep coaches, including Drake's Bob Franceschini and St. Helena's George Davis, the latter being named coach in the Shrine North-South Game this year.

Both clinics, by the way, will be dedicated to Tropp's old pal, the late Joe Verducci.

ANOTHER BIG project on the Tropp grid horizon is the second annual Diamond B Football Camp, a summer training camp for high school gridders, of which he is co-director with Bob Muenter at Piedmont High.

Located at Booneville, this is operated for strictly individuals and, in accordance with CIF regulations, is not used for team practice purposes. The fee is $150 per boy for a two week session, Aug. 2-14. The boys are drilled in all phases of football—fundamentals, theory, ethics, rules, offensive and defensive trends, game films, drill films and talks by college coaches and officials.

After two weeks with Tropp & Co., they're ready for the football season.

Among the camp counselors, by the way, are Tropp's son, Jim, a Stanford gridder, and Steve Minutoli of College of Marin.

So you see, football is not a seasonal sport in the Troppmann household. It's breakfast, lunch and dinner 12 months a year.

I mention this in case you see a football walking around town these days. Don't kick it, please. It's Tropp.

BANTAM BENNIE Ford returns to the role of matchmaker on March 1 when he presents a big show at San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, the first fistic feature at that arena since its lavish renovation. Bennie's first card will present three 10-rounders under the banner of Civic Boxing Enterprises, Leo Minskoff, promoter.

Ford, in the meantime, has his San Anselmo lunch room, "Polly's," up for sale and plans to devote full time to matchmaking.

Foreigner, Longshot Share Lucky Lead

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — This is the year longshots or foreigners finish in front of the pro golf tour--and New Zealand's Bob Charles and unheralded Billy Martindale hope it stays that way.

Charles, the lath-thin left-hander from Christchurch, tied Martindale for the lead at the halfway mark of the $57,500 San Francisco Lucky International Open. Both stood at 138, four under par at Harding Park's 6,722-yard lay-out.

Thus far on the $3 million tour, longshots Paul Harney and Wes Ellis Jr., won at Los Angeles and San Diego and Australia's Bruce Crampton finished in front in last week's Bing Crosby tournament.

Charles, former British Open champion, had a 67 yesterday to go with his opening par round of 71. He could have taken the unchallenged lead but bogied two of the last three holes.

Martindale, on tour for a year and a half, hasn't won enough money to pay his room and board and caddy fees. His highest previous finish was 15th at the Texas Open a year ago—but he holds a commanding position here with back-to-back 69s.

Two of the pre-tournament favorites — Tony Lema and defending champion Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez—failed to qualify for the final 36 holes of play. Lema was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard and Rodriguez, plagued by an injured left hand and with his eyes bothering him, tallied a fat 150.

It took 147 or better to make the 36-hole cut. Another casualty was PGA champion Bobby Nichols, who also had 150.

Trailing the leaders were two pros who could stand a big payday—slender Gardner Dickinson, a veteran from Lost Tree Village, Fla., and little Jack McGowan of Largo, Fla., a tourist for four years whose only victory was in the Mountain View Open at Corona, Calif., last year. They stood at 139.

Panagabko 'Trick' Leads The Seals

By United Press International

For offensive fireworks, it was Eddie Panagabko of San Francisco; for defensive class, it was goalie Don Head of Portland.

That was the Western Hockey League story last night as the San Francisco Seals climbed out of the league cellar with a 6-2 win over Los Angeles and Portland nipped Seattle, 2-1, to push further out in front of the pack. More than 20,000 fans saw the two contests.

Panagabko, who is the Seals captain, fired the three-goal hat trick in only 6:18 of a wild first period as the Seals built up a 5-1 lead and then coasted in.

Del Topoll and Len Haley scored for San Francisco, but then Warren Hynes made it 2-1. Then Panagabko finished off Los Angeles to the delight of the 8,144 fans at the Cow Palace by scoring at 9:28, 14:17 and 15:46. In case you're wondering if this is a league record—forget it. Archie Scott of Calgary scored three goals against Edmonton in 47 seconds on Dec. 15, 1951.

San Francisco's win tied the two teams for fifth, four points back of fourth-place Victoria.

Seattle's Jim McLeod and Portland's Don Head are running one-two in goalie standings. They showed why last night as Head stopped 23 shots and McLeod 24. But Tommy McVie and Andy Hebenton of the Bucks scored in the first 34 minutes and Bob Barlow got the Totems on the scoreboard two minutes later. That ended scoring for the night as Portland pushed three points out in front of Seattle in the standings.

A crowd of 12,247 saw that one at Seattle — second largest of the season. It was only exceeded by the more than 13,000 who saw the same two teams play last week. Portland won that one by a single goal, too.

Tonight, Vancouver is at Los Angeles and Portland at Victoria.

Hall Of Famer New A's Coach

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Gabby Hartnett, Hall of Fame catcher who played in the major leagues 19 years, has joined the Kansas City Athletics as a catching coach and administrative assistant to the owner, Charles O. Finley.

Hartnett, 63, is the second Hall of Fame member on the Athletics' staff. The other is Luke Appling, third base coach.

Finley, making the announcement Friday, said Hartnett will be with the A's for all home games. When the club is on the road Hartnett and Ed Lopat, another administrative assistant, will work with pitchers and catchers at various farm clubs.

Giants' Murakami Detained In Japan—'Great Pressure'

TOKYO (AP) — Masanori Murakami, the first Japanese to pitch in the major leagues, failed to leave today for the United States where he was to join the San Francisco Giants for spring training.

Murakami's departure was apparently blocked by the Nankai Hawks, who threatened Wednesday to keep the 20-year-old southpaw in Japan unless the Giants promise to return him after the 1965 season ends.

Today, the husky 6-foot pitcher, wearing the Hawks' uniform, appeared at Osaka Stadium.

Murakami, who posted an 11-7 record with the Giants farm club in Fresno last year, has been under tremendous pressure to remain in Japan.

The dispute arose after San Francisco last November announced purchase of Murakami's contract from the Nankai club for $10,000.

The Hawks reacted sharply to the Giants announcement when Murakami returned in December for a vacation. The Nankai club said it interpreted the $10,000 as "a sort of bonus, not trade money."

Although the Nankai club later admitted it misinterpreted the deal, it now maintains that Murakami is "the property of the Nankai club, and is merely on loan to Giants."

While the Nankai club wants Murakami to return to Japan after the 1965 season, the Giants' position is that it will keep him much longer if he makes a good showing.

Murakami, who was called up from Fresno late last year, pitched 15 innings in nine relief appearances yielding only two runs. He struck out 15, issued one base on balls, for a 1-0 record and a 1.80 earned run average.

Builders On The Road Tomorrow

Hoping for a dry field, the Billings - Hutchison Builders of Marin take to the road tomorrow for a game against Montrose Chemical on Balboa's Sundberg diamond in San Francisco, 2 p.m.

The game was originally scheduled for last Sunday but was postponed because of wet grounds.

On a five-game win streak, the Builders will send Ron Cole and Steve Miller to the mound to split the pitching duties. Two of the five Builders' wins on that streak have been no-hitters chalked up by these two righthanders.

In two previous meetings, the Builders and Montrose nine have each won one.

Redwood Retains Marin Cage Lead

Giants Eke Out Win Over 'Cats

Finishing the first half of the Marin Athletic League season on top of the heap, Redwood edged Marin Catholic 58-56 last night on the Wildcats' court.

The Giants of Redwood started off fast, scoring 21 points in the first quarter to only 10 for Marin Catholic. But the Wildcats kept pecking away at the lead until coming within two points of victory.

"It was a good thing we didn't play five quarters," mused Redwood coach Dick Hart after the close win.

Redwood had balanced scoring, with four players in double figures, while Marin depended on two boys to carry the load. Marin's Bill Shine and Tom Soden each tallied 23 points for a terrific one-two punch. But the even scoring between Tom Bly (15), Russ Smith (13), Don Detrick (12) and Charlie Davis (10) proved the better weapon.

BLY PRAISED

Hart praised the play of Bly, crediting him with "his best game of the season." He also noted that Davis hit 50 per cent from the floor, meshing four out of eight shots. "And also Detrick with his four buckets in the second quarter helped us out quite a bit," said Hart.

Redwood, in pushing its MAL record to five wins and one loss, hit 45 per cent from the floor, hitting 24 buckets out of 53 shots. "It was good team play," said Hart.

Redwood rebounders Chuck Meyer and Bly each hauled down nine from the boards.

San Rafael Rallies To 62-50 Win

San Rafael High School's Bulldog cagers polished off Terra Linda 62-50 last night to close out the first half of the Marin Athletic basketball season.

The Trojans started off with a 12-8 first quarter lead, but then San Rafael went wild in the second quarter to rack up 24 points and take a 32-26 lead at half. Early in the final quarter Terra Linda got within five points of the winners, but that is as close as the Trojans could get.

The Bulldogs didn't control the boards in the first quarter, but did for the rest of the game and that was the story. Many of San Rafael's points were after offensive rebounds.

OVERLID HIGH

Terry Overlid with 19 points and Ken Erdman with 17 paced the attack for San Rafael, hitting big on shots from under the hoop. Tom Untermann scored 12 points for San Rafael, mostly on shots from outside the key, and all in the first half. San Rafael coach Mike Diaz credited guard Bill Pandiani with a great floor game.

Leading the scoring for Terra Linda were Keith Shields with 14 points and Don Knotts with 11. San Rafael got off 65 shots to 52 for Terra Linda, a result of the better rebounding.

Untermann and Bob Rich led the San Rafael rebounding with 7 each, while Overlid had 6. Knotts topped the rebounding for Terra Linda with 6.

'B' Tie Is Broken By Redwood

Redwood High School's Class B cagers had a hard time breaking their first place tie with Marin Catholic's babes yesterday but one point did it.

The little Giants nipped the Wildkittens of Marin Catholic 41-40 in a thrilling preliminary game that saw the Marin quint come from 10 points back to within a point with six seconds left in the game. But the Wildkittens couldn't get off a shot in that time and had to suffer the loss.

The Redwood win gave the Giant Bees sole possession of first place in the Marin Athletic League Class B standings.

Andre Horn of Redwood was the star of the show, canning 22 points to take the scoring honors. Redwood's rebounding was done quite adequately by Dave Kilmer and Jack Fitzhenry, each with 14.

Cessarino Bornia was Marin Catholic's top performer with 16 points and 11 rebounds. Jim Ingrassia had 13 rebounds and Tim Lennehan had 11 off the boards.

In the other Class B game of the evening, San Rafael evened its record at 3-3 with a 47-39 triumph over Terra Linda. Leading the Bullpups of San Rafael were Bob Curry with 12 points and Sam Crowell with 10.

Redwood finished off the first half of the basketball season with all four of its teams in first place in their respective leagues. The Giants, with all four teams—varsity, junior varsity, Class B and frosh—starting fast, compiled a record of winning 21 out of 24 league contests.

Yesterday, the junior varsity team from Redwood downed Marin Catholic 60-39. Jim Marc topped the scoring for Redwood with 21 points and was followed by teammate George Bertram with 12. Greg Perez scored 12 for Marin.

In freshman action, Redwood beat Marin 44-28 behind the 14 points of Keith Valk.

A NIGHT OF SHOCKERS

Iowa Stuns UCLA; Who Is No.1 Now?

CHICAGO (AP) — The underdogs got in a big bite at Chicago Stadium last night, with unranked Iowa spilling the top-rated basketball power, UCLA, 87-82 and unsung Loyola of Chicago upsetting No. 5 Wichita 93-92 in overtime.

The stunning defeats of the two powers overshadowed results elsewhere. Denver upset Southern California 79-78, Wyoming downed San Jose 92-70 for its sixth straight, LaSalle edged New Orleans Loyola 72-69, Oregon beat Oregon State 59-53, Brigham Young crushed Air Force 110-77 and Georgia Tech defeated Arkansas 93-82.

After the night of surprises was over, the main shout was "who's No. 1 now?"

Naturally, it came from Iowa's dressing room after Coach Ralph Miller, in his first season after being hired from Wichita, had been carried off the floor on the shoulders of Hawkeye fans and players.

It was only the second loss for the NCAA championship Bruins in their last 45 games and ended a 13-game winning streak. Illinois dumped them 110-83 last December. Iowa is 10-5 over-all this season but holds second place in the Big Ten race with a 4-1 mark.

"This was our best game of the season," said Miller. "Even a little better than we played in beating Indiana."

Then, Gary Thompson, Miller's former assistant at Wichita and now the Shockers' head coach, entered the room.

"After what happened tonight, the folks at Wichita may want to kick me out and get Ralph back," Thompson quipped. "How about that, do you fellows want him to go back?"

"No, no," the gleeful Hawkeyes shouted.

Tom Markey's follow-up shot in the final second of overtime gave Loyola its victory over Wichita. The Ramblers had to overcome a 45-point production by the Shockers' great Dave Stallworth, whose eligibility will end with today's game against Louisville.

One of Loyola's main surprises was Billy Smith, absent two years because of scholastic ineligibility. Smith, playing his first game of the season, pumped in 38 points, including a basket in the final 30 seconds that locked the score 83-83 and sent the game into overtime.

Iowa got 28 points from Chris Pervall and held UCLA ace Gail Goodrich to 13 in whipping the Bruins.

Goodrich picked up his fourth personal foul with 16 minutes to play as Iowa rolled up a 64-55 lead.

Uclan Coach Johnny Wooden was impressed with the Hawkeyes.

"I said earlier, Iowa was a team to be reckoned with in the Big Ten this season because it is getting better right along. Miller has done an excellent job with them and it certainly was no disgrace to lose to such a team."

A Just Ruling For Chi Chi; Who Blew Whistle On Him?

HANLEY

It would have been ludicrous if Chi Chi Rodriguez had been barred from PGA tournaments on an absurd technicality raised by some envious golfers at the start of the Lucky International which Chi Chi won last year.

A device designed to give a player artificial aid in gripping or swinging a golf club is prohibited by USGA rules and, of course, the PGA abides by those rules. Chi Chi wears a leather brace on his left hand to protect a weak thumb injured last May in Las Vegas at the Tournament of Champions.

Jack Tuthill, PGA tournament supervisor, neatly disposed of the protest in quick fashion, ruling that Chi Chi's leather brace was a medical, not artificial aid. It was a just and equitable ruling. There was only one thing wrong with it. Tuthill also should have announced the identity of Chi Chi's anonymous accusers.

For nine months Rodriguez has been wearing the brace and nobody questioned his right to do so until the colorful and pint-sized Puerto Rican returned to San Francisco's Harding Park to defend his Lucky title.

"MR. TUTHILL'S decision saved for me the only way I know to make a living," said Chi Chi.

Actually, that isn't precisely true because Chi Chi, if barred from tournament play, still could teach golf at his home course in Puerto Rico. Nevertheless, the little fellow might have had his main source of income shut off.

CHI CHI is one of the most colorful golfers to arrive on the scene since the great Walter Hagen. Chi Chi chats with the gallery customers, uses body English on his putts and jumps with joy when he hits a crisp shot pin high.

The very thought of someone trying to have him barred on a surreptitious charge is enough to make the blood of any real sportsman boil.

In making the ruling he did, Tuthill used sensible logic in declaring Chi Chi's leather brace a medical rather than artificial aid. After all, the brace was designed for Chi Chi by a doctor.

BUT SINCE someone sneakily tried to blow the whistle on Chi Chi what about those gloves virtually all of the pros wear? Wouldn't they fit the description of "a device designed to give a player artificial aid in gripping or swinging a club?"

Billy Mills To Rest For Two Weeks

BOSTON (AP) — Marine Lt. Billy Mills, the Olympic 10,000-meter champion, said yesterday he will drop indoor track competition for two weeks to concentrate on training after he runs the Hunter mile in the Boston Athletic Association Games Saturday night.

Mills denied previous reports he would not run here, although he admitted he has been tired out by a steady diet of competition sandwiched around banquets and various public appearances.

"I hope to have at least two weeks off," said the 26-year-old star. "I haven't had any time to practice at all."

Asked if he had a specific date or meet he had as a target to return to racing, Mills replied:

"I have no goals for the indoor season. I do plan to compete a few more times indoors but I'm not sure what meets yet.

"However, I will be in New York for the Nationals barring something unforeseen."

Mills finished a poor third in the two-mile run in the Millrose Games Thursday night in New York.

Billie Jean, Pal Lose In Aussie Doubles Finals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australia's Margaret Smith and Lesley Turner came from behind after losing the first set and defeated America's Billie Jean Moffitt and Robbyn Ebbern of Australia for the women's doubles championship in the Australian Tennis Championships today.

Miss Moffitt, from Long Beach, Calif. and Miss Ebbern swarmed over their opponents and won the first set 6-1. But then the Aussie team came back with 6-2 and 6-3 victories to take the match.

Miss Smith and Miss Moffitt dominated the match with first Miss Turner and then Miss Ebbern suffering long lapses during which they were almost unable to win a point.

Fred Stolle and Roy Emerson, Australia's top players, reached the men's finals with victories. Stolle whipped countryman Tony Roche 6-4, 8-6 and 9-7 while Emerson took another Aussie, John Newcombe, 7-5, 6-4, 6-1.

Wilt Packs Them In Again As 76ers Stop The Celts

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain has done two things for the Philadelphia 76ers.

He's brought prosperity back to the National Basketball Association team since the 76ers acquired him from the San Francisco Warriors a little over two weeks ago.

And he's teamed with guard Hal Greer to give the 76ers a new Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside.

The 7-foot-1 Chamberlain has played in two games in his native city and the 76ers have drawn almost 17,000 fans. Prior to his coming here, the crowds were averaging about 2,000.

Chamberlain and the 76ers bested Bill Russell and the Boston Celtics 118-105 last night in the second game of a doubleheader at convention hall before 10,831, the largest crowd to see a regular season pro basketball game here in almost four years. In the opener, New York defeated Detroit 106-99.

In other NBA action last night, St. Louis downed Baltimore 124-119 and Los Angeles outlasted Cincinnati 137-133 in double overtime.

Ironically, Boston has lost only nine games this season, four of them to Philadelphia. Early in the season, the 76ers defeated Boston after the Celtics had reeled off 11 straight wins. And Philadelphia last week snapped a 16-game Boston winning streak.

Mr. Outside, Greer was free often last night since the Celtics were sagging back on Chamberlain. And Hal killed them, making 14 field goals in 22 attempts and 3 for 3 from the free throw line to emerge the high scorer with 31 points.

Chamberlain scored 27 points and grabbed 34 rebounds while holding Russell to 12 points and 17 rebounds.

Boston had a cold shooting night, hitting on only 40 field goals in 124 attempts. John Havilcek was high for the Celtics with 25 points.

The Last Rites For Stuhldreher

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The men with whom he played and those who got such a thrill from it pay their final respects today to Harry Stuhldreher, quarterback of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen backfield.

Stuhldreher, 63, died Tuesday. The "Little General" had undergone major surgery 12 days previous.

Among the 13 pallbearers will be Don Miller, Elmer Layden and Jim Crowley, the other three members of the backfield that became a legend and lifted Notre Dame to the top of collegiate football ranks in the early 1920's.

Also serving will be Joe Bach, Rip Miller, Charles Collins and Adam Walsh—stalwarts among the Seven Mules, the line that played in front of the Horsemen.

Unity Octave Opened Doors, San Rafael Clergy Agree

By JEFF GREER

What impact, what effect did the just-concluded Christian Unity Octave have upon the religious life of San Rafael?

"Suspicion of the other man's beliefs has been replaced by respect; the way is cleared for a meaningful conversation about our churches' similarities and differences."

This, in essence, was the answer from clergymen of the four Protestant churches of San Rafael which joined St. Raphael's Catholic Church in sponsoring the third annual Octave. The week-long observance set precedents: It was the first time Catholic parishioners participated in worship services in San Rafael non-Catholic churches; it was the first time the Sisters at Dominican College participated publicly in the Octave; it was the first time a Protestant congregation has been personally given a report on the Vatican Councils by a high official of the Catholic church.

The formal worship services in the First Methodist, First Presbyterian, St. Paul's Episcopal and Trinity Lutheran churches drew audiences ranging from a minimum of 250 to "standing room only." The Episcopal congregation's dinner and speech by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of the Archdiocese of San Francisco, and the Christian Hymn Festival also were enthusiastically supported, participating ministers agreed.

But what appeared to grip the imaginations of the laymen were the small, less formal "neighborhood conversation" meetings in 30 San Rafael homes. Participants, who may have known each other socially, in business, or not at all even though neighbors, were so impressed by the chance to talk to each other about their beliefs, that they want more such opportunities.

The proposal was advanced that the neighborhood gatherings be repeated as Paschal dinners, at Easter.

Throughout the Unity Octave, stress was laid upon similarities of beliefs in the four churches. The sermons concentrated upon a common bond in the Apostles Creed.

"I was delighted to be able to enter fully into the other churches' service of worship without any fear, without any strain of my beliefs. And there was no feeling that the other churches had to compromise," one pastor related.

"The whole feeling was positive, not negative," commented another minister. He pointed out that Archbishop McGucken stressed that the Twentieth Century Vatican Councils are far different from those of the past, in that the Roman Catholic Church and the Councils are now stressing ecumenism and similarities between the churches, not condemning non-Catholic churches.

The pastors admitted encountering feeling among laymen that the Octave would "make Catholics of everyone" or "make Protestants of us all," but thought the observance dispelled the feelings among doubters who did participate.

The people-to-people respect was stressed by another comment, on the final night of formal services in Trinity Lutheran Church, where the audience sits "in the round" surrounding the altar.

"You didn't sit there and look at the backs of heads; you sat there and faced a Sister, or a priest, or the pastor of another church . . . and their lay people, too."

Will the Octave be repeated in 1966? Almost certainly, agreed all the clergymen, "The people want it."

Cooperating in the recent Octave were the late Msgr. Daniel T. McAlister, who died only three days before the observance began, his assistants at St. Raphael's Parish, Rev. John F. Petroni and Rev. John Reilly; Rev. John D. Riley and Rev. Kenneth Anderson of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; Rev. Wesley C. Baker and Rev. T. Royal Scott of First Presbyterian; Rev. Fred C. Braunschweiger of Trinity Lutheran and Rev. Donald H. Baldwin of First Methodist. Numerous laymen, particularly in St. Raphael's Parish, also worked on the Octave preparations.

Will other churches participate in the future?

That depends on a number of factors, the pastors said. Since the participation was limited to the boundaries of St. Raphael's Parish, some churches could not do so. Other churches within the area have not felt it desirable to participate in the ecumenical movement, it was pointed out.

But the Octave, as one cleric pointed out, especially "set the stage for a real, honest conversation between the various bodies. I don't see this as just a kind of togetherness . . . but in the past there has been only suspicion. Now there can be honest conversation about not only the similarities, but also the differences between us."

Anti-Poverty War Seeks Church Aid

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A great recruiting campaign is under way in America. Its purpose is to enlist church and synagogue congregations in the war against poverty.

One of the recruiters is Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. He hopes that Protestants, Catholics and Jews will bring to the fight against poverty the same zeal and interfaith solidarity they displayed last year in campaigining for the civil rights law.

"The struggle against racial injustice seems to be moving ahead very rapidly," Shriver said in an interview. "And one of the reasons is that all three faiths got behind the moral issue involved. The elimination of poverty is no less a moral challenge than the elimination of prejudice. Every religion teacher that we must make the poor our personal concern."

Religious leaders agree. The National Council of Churches has launched a countrywide effort to mobilize Protestant congregations for constructive service to the poor in their communities. United Church Women—a potent organization which includes 10 million members of ladies' auxiliaries — has made the anti-poverty program its "special emphasis" for the next two years.

Msgr. Raymond J. Gallagher, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, recently appealed to all Catholic parishes to become "dynamic spearheads" in community action programs designed to help all of the poor, regardless of race, color or creed.

Rabbi Leon Feuer, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, said Jews are ready to unite with Protestants and Catholics in "awakening the conscience of the nation to the moral evil of tolerating poverty in the midst of plenty." But he warned that it won't be easy. "I fear," he said, "that our smug and complacent American society couldn't care less about pockets of poverty which are out of sight and out of mind."

There is a general consensus that the first thing a church or synagogue must do is to convince its well-fed members that there really are people in the community who are desperately poor, through no particular fault of their own.

Construction Project Ends At St. Hilary's

Renovation of the rectory of St. Hilary's Catholic Church in Tiburon completes the million-dollar, three year building program of the parish, Rev. John J. Murray reported this week.

The parish, in addition to the enlarged rectory, now possessed a church seating 400 parishioners, a school with eight classrooms and a large auditorium, and an adequate convent for the teaching sisters.

St. Hilary's School now has classes in five grades, and will add the sixth grade in September, Father Murray said. The principal, Sister Athanasium, is on leave, attending the general chapter meeting of her order Sisters of the Holy Faith, in Dublin, Ireland. Assistant principal Sister Mary Giovanni is in charge.

His lectures will be non-technical and simply stated, according to Carolyn M. Crabtree, publicity chairman for the series.

Rich But Lacking

NEW YORK (AP) — The Catholic Digest says that the Roman Catholic Church was the world's richest landlord in the 300 years from 1050 to 1350 but that the economic straining of building 80 Gothic cathedrals in France was so great that not a single one was ever finished.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

There Are Scientific Reasons Behind Native Voodoo Deaths

VAN DELLEN

Educated, civilized persons find it difficult to believe that primitive people may become seriously ill or die when subjected to sorcery or black magic. The late Dr. Walter B. Cannon looked up reports along this line and found many authentic instances among natives of Africa, Haiti, Brazil, Australia, and in the Pacific islands. Several were examined prior to death and autopsied afterward. There was no evidence of poisoning or a physical reason for dying.

A young African was tricked into eating the forbidden wild hen. On being told of his crime two years later, he trembled, was overcome by fear, and died in 24 hours. A Maori woman ate fruit that she later learned came from a tabooed place. She exclaimed that the sanctity of the chief had been profaned and that his spirit would kill her. She was dead in less than 24 hours.

A MORE COMMON way to bring about voodoo death is to be bewitched by the chief or the medicine man, who points an object (such as a bone), at the victim. On realizing he has been boned, he becomes a pitiful sight. He lays down, "pines away, and his strength runs out like water."

Is there any scientific reason for voodoo deaths? These individuals go into a state of shock precipitated by powerful emotional stress such as obvious or repressed terror. This releases a large outpouring of adrenalin.

SEVERAL INSTANCES were reported during World War I in which men who had a terrifying experience went into shock. Primitive peoples are better candidates because of superstition and ignorance. They have little knowledge but a fertile and unrestricted imagination that fills their environment with all manner of evil spirits capable of affecting their lives disastrously. They are in a highly suggestible state when bewitched.

But this is not all. Their relatives immediately withdraw their sustaining support, leaving the doomed individual alone and isolated. The only escape from the situation is death. The relatives often return to the victim just prior to death and subject him to the fateful ritual of mourning. They add to his plight by guiding him out of the land of the living into that of the dead.

NONFUNCTIONING KIDNEYS

A. M. writes: What causes uremic poisoning?

REPLY

Kidney failure. These organs eliminate certain wastes from the body. When they are unable to function properly, chemicals that have a toxic effect upon the body accumulate in the blood.

SHUTTING OUT NOISE

P. K. writes: I live in a noisy dormitory and find studying difficult. So I bought a pair of ear plugs in the dime store. Now I'm wondering if they are safe to use.

REPLY

Yes, provided the plugs do not irritate the outer ear canal.

ASPIRIN

K. E. writes: I take aspirin all the time for arhritis in the heels. Do you think this drug will dry up my blood?

REPLY

No. It is the least harmful of our painkillers. Are you sure you have arthritis and not spurs of the heels?

BACTERIAL INFECTION

L. S. writes: Is brucelosis caused by a virus?

REPLY

No—by the Brucella group of bacteria. There are three types: Br. melitensis comes from goats, Br. suis from hogs, and Br. abortus from cattle. Most human infections stem from the latter.

MENTAL ILLNESS

M. W. writes: Has research uncovered the cause of schizophrenia?

REPLY

No. It may be of chemical origin or caused by previous injury to the brain. This mental condition often begins early in life, after periods of unusual emotional stress.

ELEVATED TEMPERATURE

Mrs. F. writes: My 19-month-old baby runs a temperature of 100.8 degrees F most of the time. Occasionally it goes above 101. He has been examined by three doctors who can find nothing wrong after tests of blood, urine, stools, and various X-rays. Am I an overanxious mother who is worrying needlessly?

REPLY

Yes, provided the child is gaing weight, eating properly, and is active. If so, put the thermometer away and concentrate on improving your child's mental and physical well-being.

EMOTIONAL BLINDNESS

E. A. writes: What can you tell me about hysterical blindness?

REPLY

In this condition, the person claims he cannot see, even though his eyes are perfect — an example of mind over matter. These individuals have a severe emotional illness.

Today's Health Hint — Keep your steps and sidewalks clean.

Homeowners Are Cool To Annex Plan

The Marinwood Community Services District board has received word that residents of Upper Lucas Valley are not enthusiastic about annexing to the district.

Directors received a letter from S. J. Dorst, president of the Upper Lucas Valley Homeowners Assn., Thursday saying there is not enough interest for annexation now.

Directors also heard a report from Walter Van Gelder, parks and recreation commissioner, and George H. Rodgers, San Rafael city planning director, on the status of the move to save lands between Old and New Lucas Valley roads from being infringed upon by highway widening.

The district is negotiating with the county for a permanent easement on the county portion of the lands to be kept as open parkland.

The board appointed Gust Stromner of 389 Quietwood Drive as a fire commissioner for a one-year term, and accepted the resignation of Mrs. William Waring from the Marinwood Parks and Recreation Commission. Mrs. Waring is moving from the district.

Double Trouble Being Overcome

Trouble came double for the family of Billy V. Myers, but thanks to kind Novato neighbors, it is being overcome.

The trouble started last Oct. 15 when a step broke at Houghton Produce Co. in Fairfield where Myers was working. He was thrown from the stairway, crushing the lower part of his spine. He was in Woodland Hospital for over two months.

On Dec. 22—the day before Myers was released from the hospital—his 5-year-old son Billy V. Jr. became extremely ill. The boy was taken to the hospital the same day the father left it.

Doctors at Woodland Hospital were unable to diagnose young Billy's illness, his mother said. On Dec. 26, he was transferred to University of California Hospital in San Francisco. By that time, he was blind.

Doctors there discovered a tumor behind his eyes. An operation was tried Jan. 13, but the tumor could not be removed.

While Mrs. Myers stayed near her son at the hospital, her husband — still on crutches — and daughter Patricia Faye, 12, kept house in Fairfield for the two youngest children, Edwin Luis, 4, and James Lee, 2.

Two weeks ago, doctors said Billy could leave the hospital but would have to be taken there each day for radiation treatments. They suggested he be kept someplace nearer than Fairfield.

That's when the kind Novato neighbors appeared.

Mrs. Harold Halford of 1124 Third Street, Novato, met the Myerses when her son, Cary, 3, was in the same hospital room with Billy. She knew of a house next door to hers that could be rented.

She made the arrangements for the house. A week ago today, Halford and a friend, Lloyd James, moved the Myerses belongings to Novato by truck.

Another problem developed because Myers' 1952 car had mechanical trouble and could not be driven daily to San Francisco.

Again, kind friends appeared. Volunteers from the Cancer Society took over the transportation job temporarily. A more permanent arrangement is needed, though, said Mrs. Myers.

Doctors still do not know whether they can restore Billy's sight. But his mother is hopeful. He has regained a little vision in the right eye, she said.

Channel Dredging Is Debated

Clam shell vs. hydraulic dredging for the Bolinas Lagoon channel was discussed at a meeting Thursday night of the Bolinas Harbor Commission. Fifty persons attended.

Proponents of the hydraulic method from the audience, reported commissioner Clyde W. King, claim that dredging by the hydraulic method allows material to be pumped a distance away, whereas material is apt to wash back into the channel using the clam shell method.

The commission agreed to get dredging information from the Army Corps of Engineers prior to awarding any contract.

Further investigation is to be made by district engineers, John A. Blume Associates of San Francisco, and the company will report on the whole problem of channel opening Feb. 25, according to engineer Frank Gordon.

Gene W. McDaniel was re-elected president for 1963; King was elected vice president; Louis J. DeGhelder, re-elected secretary, and Mrs. Harriet Greene, re-appointed treasurer.

Community Center Will Be Closed

The Marinwood Community Center, 775 Miller Creek Road, will be closed Monday and Tuesday for floor repairs, according to Mrs. Genevieve Bolding, secretary of the Marinwood Community Services District.

All activities scheduled for the two days are canceled, Mrs. Bolding said.

Theft From Car

Martin E. Nelsen of 60 Tarry Road, Sleepy Hollow, told sheriff's deputies today that someone stole a $50 tachometer from his sedan, parked in the driveway of his home, between 10:45 p.m. yesterday and 6:30 a.m. today.

Marin's Landmark Mountain Over Greenbrae

Mount Tamalpais provides an impressive and serene skyline for residents of Greenbrae, Larkspur and Kentfield.

This aerial photo shows some of the homes of Greenbrae in the foreground, lining the east side of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. On the west side can be seen the Bon Air Shopping Center.

Further on are the Bon Air Apartments. Marin General Hospital is mostly hidden beyond the crest of the hill.

On the opposite edge of the picture some of the buildings of Marin Catholic High School can be seen. Beyond is the College of Marin playfield.

Kent Woodlands spreads up the brush-covered slopes of Mount Tamalpais. The ridges of the mountain are traced by fire breaks, appearing as light lines in this picture.

Profile Of A Marinite—Judge Wilson

The Bench Represents Culmination Of His Boyhood Dreams

JOSEPH GARDNER WILSON was appointed to the Marin Municipal Court bench in October of 1960, thus attaining his boyhood ambition. Last year, he was elected to a full term, and in 1965 he is serving his county as presiding judge of its municipal courts.

By ROSS DAVIS

As a lad, Joseph Gardner Wilson may have entertained fleeting yens to become a rivet-catcher, a trapeze aerialist or to drive a train.

But these urges didn't linger, because he now recalls only one serious aim of his earlier years — to be a judge.

And a judge he is, in an almost perfect "All-American" judicial image of austerity tempered with humor, justice salted with mercy, progression springing from tried-and-true principles.

HE WEARS his sober black robe with dignity, yet even the newest observer in his Marin municipal courtroom likely will agree this judge does not take himself overly seriously. He is softspoken, both on the bench and off, but his words can carry a gravity which causes even the jauntiest offender to take sudden heed.

Furthermore, Joe Wilson has a rare distinction among men: He is exactly where he wants to be, and he has the good sense to appreciate it.

"It's the type of job I've always wanted, as long as I can remember," he says. "A judgeship is something I'd hoped for, but never really expected — the opportunity, I mean — because there are a number of qualified people who never happened to be in the right place at the right time."

THE "ALL-American" look isn't deceptive, either. He may not have been the biggest man in collegiate extra-curricular activities, but he played three years on the tennis squad, had a stint with the debate team, joined the college's newspaper staff and belonged to a Greek fraternity.

On the legal side, his image also holds up well.

Wilson, 46, is a third generation judge; his grandfather, also Joseph Gardner Wilson, was a circuit judge in the 1860s in Oregon. His father, Fred W. Wilson, now deceased, later served Oregon in the same capacity for 31 years.

At Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash., the present Judge Wilson was a social science major.

BETWEEN school sessions, he worked in Salem, Ore., as court bailiff. The job involved a bit of many diverse duties, including carrying books to judges, but they were legal books, and the osmosis of lawyering continued. Nor did the determination to enter the legal field falter.

Later, at the Willamette School of Law in Salem, he began his law studies, working part time in the State Supreme Court's library.

That choice of a job, he recalls, was auspicious. Between tasks of dusting heavy volumes of state statutes, he found the opportunity to also open them for study, a neat wedding of interests which, not incidentally, netted him $100 a month salary.

"Peculiarly," says Judge Wilson, "this was even more money than I needed."

WITH THE outbreak of World War II, he served with the Navy as a lieutenant aboard a destroyer in the Pacific, entering the service in 1943 and serving until 1945.

That same year he married Betty Lovelace of Seattle, and in April of 1946 resumed studies at Stanford University Law School. It was there, in the summer of 1947, that he finished his schoolwork and returned to Oregon where he took and passed the state bar examination.

Six months later he joined the legal staff of the Atomic Energy Commission in Hanford, Wash., and later worked with the Public Housing Administration's San Francisco branch.

HE CAME to Marin County in 1951, practicing private law for 18 months before rejoining the Atomic Commission staff in San Francisco. In 1953, he returned to Marin and practiced law here for the next seven years.

From 1955 to 1957 he served as a San Rafael city councilman, but was defeated in his bid for re-election.

In addition to the city council post, he has been a member of the Marin Council for Prevention of Crime and Delinquency, the chairman of the Chamber of Commerce education committee, the vice-president of the Marin United Fund, and the Marin representative on the United Bay Area Crusade executive committee.

The "All-American" image is further bolstered by a past-presidency of the Marin Toastmasters Club and a vice-presidency of the San Rafael Optimists Club.

IN JUNE of 1960, Wilson sought the Democratic nomination for the State Assembly, feeling it would better qualify him for an eventual judgeship. He was defeated. But with advancement of then Marin Municipal Judge Richard M. Sims Jr. to the superior court bench, Wilson says, "I felt I had as good a chance as anyone" for the vacated post and submitted a letter to Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

"I felt I had a few things going for me," he recalls. "I was president of the Marin County Bar Assn., and I had had some political exposure."

The appointment came through, and on Oct. 14, 1960, Wilson attained his boyhood goal by becoming a judge.

In the 1964 June primary election, he ran unopposed. This year, under the rotation system, he will be the presiding judge in Marin's municipal courts.

OF COURT problems in Marin, the judge believes the most pressing is the increasing volume of cases, particularly in the traffic category. He is, however, quick to defend what often is criticized as the slowness of our legal processes.

"The traditional forms of law are the best known methods of preserving the rights and determining the duties of the individual in his relationship with his government," Judge Wilson asserted.

"These are not technicalities," he adds, "but are proven ways of preserving basic rights. They characterize a society that is devoted to the individual. I truly believe in this."

Judge and Mrs. Wilson have three children, Paul, 17, a freshman at Harvard University, Sara, 15, a sophomore at Dominican Upper School, and baby Kathryn Patricia, born Dec. 22. They reside at 219 Riviera Drive in San Rafael.

'How Did My Freshly Cleaned Sweaters Get Moth Holes?'

That does seem like a mystery. You had your sweaters cleaned, placed in plastic bags and now they appear to have moth holes. You are right. They are moth holes.

Analysis identifies the sweaters as wool and the damage as being caused by moths or moth larva. However, in spite of the extensive damage there are no residues present on the fabric. That indicates that the damage occurred before rather than since the last time your sweaters were cleaned.

Moth damage, especially on knits, may be concerned on a soiled garment until the broken fibers ravel during the cleaning process. The damage to your sweaters evidently was done before the garments were cleaned. Because you didn't inspect them before storing them in the plastic bags, you were not aware of the raveling which followed the earlier moth damage. A closer inspection before cleaning would have revealed the damage done by the moths.

PAT MONAHAN OF Novato grooms her one-and-a-half-year-old miniature schnauzer, Marin's Mischief. Mischief began her show ring career this winter, and her owner has high hopes that she will achieve championship status as a show dog.

THE MINIATURE SCHNAUZER

For Enthusiast Pat Monahan, There's Just One Dog Breed

By DON KEOWN

As a child, Pat Monahan lived beside a Wisconsin lake where her grandfather operated a dog kennel and raised cocker spaniels.

There she used to brush the spaniels, eight hours a day, for wages of five cents a day, "simply because I loved to be around dogs."

And her own pets were, invariably, cocker spaniels.

But today she's strictly a miniature schnauzer fan.

"They are the only breed, as far as I am concerned," she says. "They are the perfect dog."

MRS. MONAHAN acquired her first "minnie" from a West Coast breeder five years ago. But she had known and loved them previously through midwestern friends who raised the little canines.

Why a schnauzer?

"I am troubled with asthma," she explains, "and I needed a dog that shed no hair, had no odor and flaked no skin."

That first dog was Diane of Windy Hill. One of her daughters became Champion Christmas of Marin, to date Mrs. Monahan's lone champion, but not, she is confident, her last.

SINCE THE acquisition of Diane of Windy Hill, she has bred "litters and litters" of the little schnauzers under her "Minnies of Marin" breeding name.

And her dogs have become known throughout the country.

"My dogs have been shown from coast to coast," she says, "and I have sold dogs to owners from Florida to Vancouver, Wash."

Her "minnies" bring $150 and up.

"AND I LIKE to sell them to people who will show them," she adds. "I don't like to see them wind up sitting in some one's backyard as pets only. These are winners, and they belong in the ring."

Right now, Mrs. Monahan has at her own Novato home seven "minnies" — her stud dogs, brood bitches and three show dogs.

Of the two dogs currently being shown by her trainer, conditioner and handler, Ann Taylor of San Jose, she has high championship aspirations for two.

'Minnies Of Marin' Are Known Across The Country

THOSE TWO dogs are being shown in Portland, Ore., this weekend in what Mrs. Monahan hopes will be another big step forward in their advance up dogdom's ladder to the coveted champion status.

Furthermore, she is hopeful of qualifying the two little schnauzers for the big 1965 Westminster show to be held in mid-February in New York's Madison Square Garden.

"California minnies have won the Westminster class title the last two years," she declares.

Miniature schnauzers, she also points out, are now ranked among the 10 most popular dog breeds in this country.

"AND IN Northern California, they are gaining fast," she adds. "As a result, dog show competition is becoming more and more intense."

Why this growing popularity?

Pat Monahan speaks with enthusiasm.

"The typical miniature is hardy and active, intelligent, fond of children and a good ratter. By vocation, the Schnauzer was originally a yard and stable dog, a guard, and a destroyer of vermin.

"However, the miniature is not a fighter, and is admirably fitted for his primary vocation as a companion and pet."

THE SCHNAUZER, she adds, is, as the name indicates, of German origin, and is said to be recognizable from pictures of the 15th century.

The miniature schnauzer, derived from the standard or medium schnauzer (there is also a giant schnauzer), was produced by the selection of small specimens, and crossing them with affenpinschers. They were exhibited as early as 1899 as a distinct breed.

Miniature schnauzers have been bred in the United States since 1925 and have climbed steadily in popularity.

THE STANDARD height for miniature schnauzers is from 12 to 14 inches. The dog has a hard, wiry coat with abundant whiskers and leg furnishings.

Mrs. Monahan says she was attracted to the "minnie" instead of the standard schnauzer "because his size makes him suitable for town life and small quarters. But at the same time, he is also perfectly at home in the country. He can live anywhere."

The schnauzer is "cat-like" in his movement, fast and with most of his strength in his forelegs, she adds, thus accounting for his skill as a vermin catcher.

Her little dogs have brought home mice for proud display.

AND THE "minnie" remains, like his larger ancestors, an excellent watchdog.

"They're friendly, but they are also barkers, and they'll make a lot of racket if there is an intruder around."

Early training is essential, she says, in determining the dog's future personality and characteristics.

Each of Pat Monahan's dogs has his own individual bed or box in which to sleep in the room that has been set aside as their bedroom.

"I believe in keeping dogs together. I don't believe in separating them," she says.

CHAMPION Christmas of Marin has had two litters.

Of the first litter of three puppies, two became show dogs. And of the second litter of five, all five are in the show ring.

"That last is almost unbelievable," Mrs. Monahan says. "If ever a breeder's dream came true, mine did then."

The sire of the five puppies was Champion Gaylord of Windyhill.

IMPORTANT steps in the preparation of pups for careers in the show ring are the docking and the cropping.

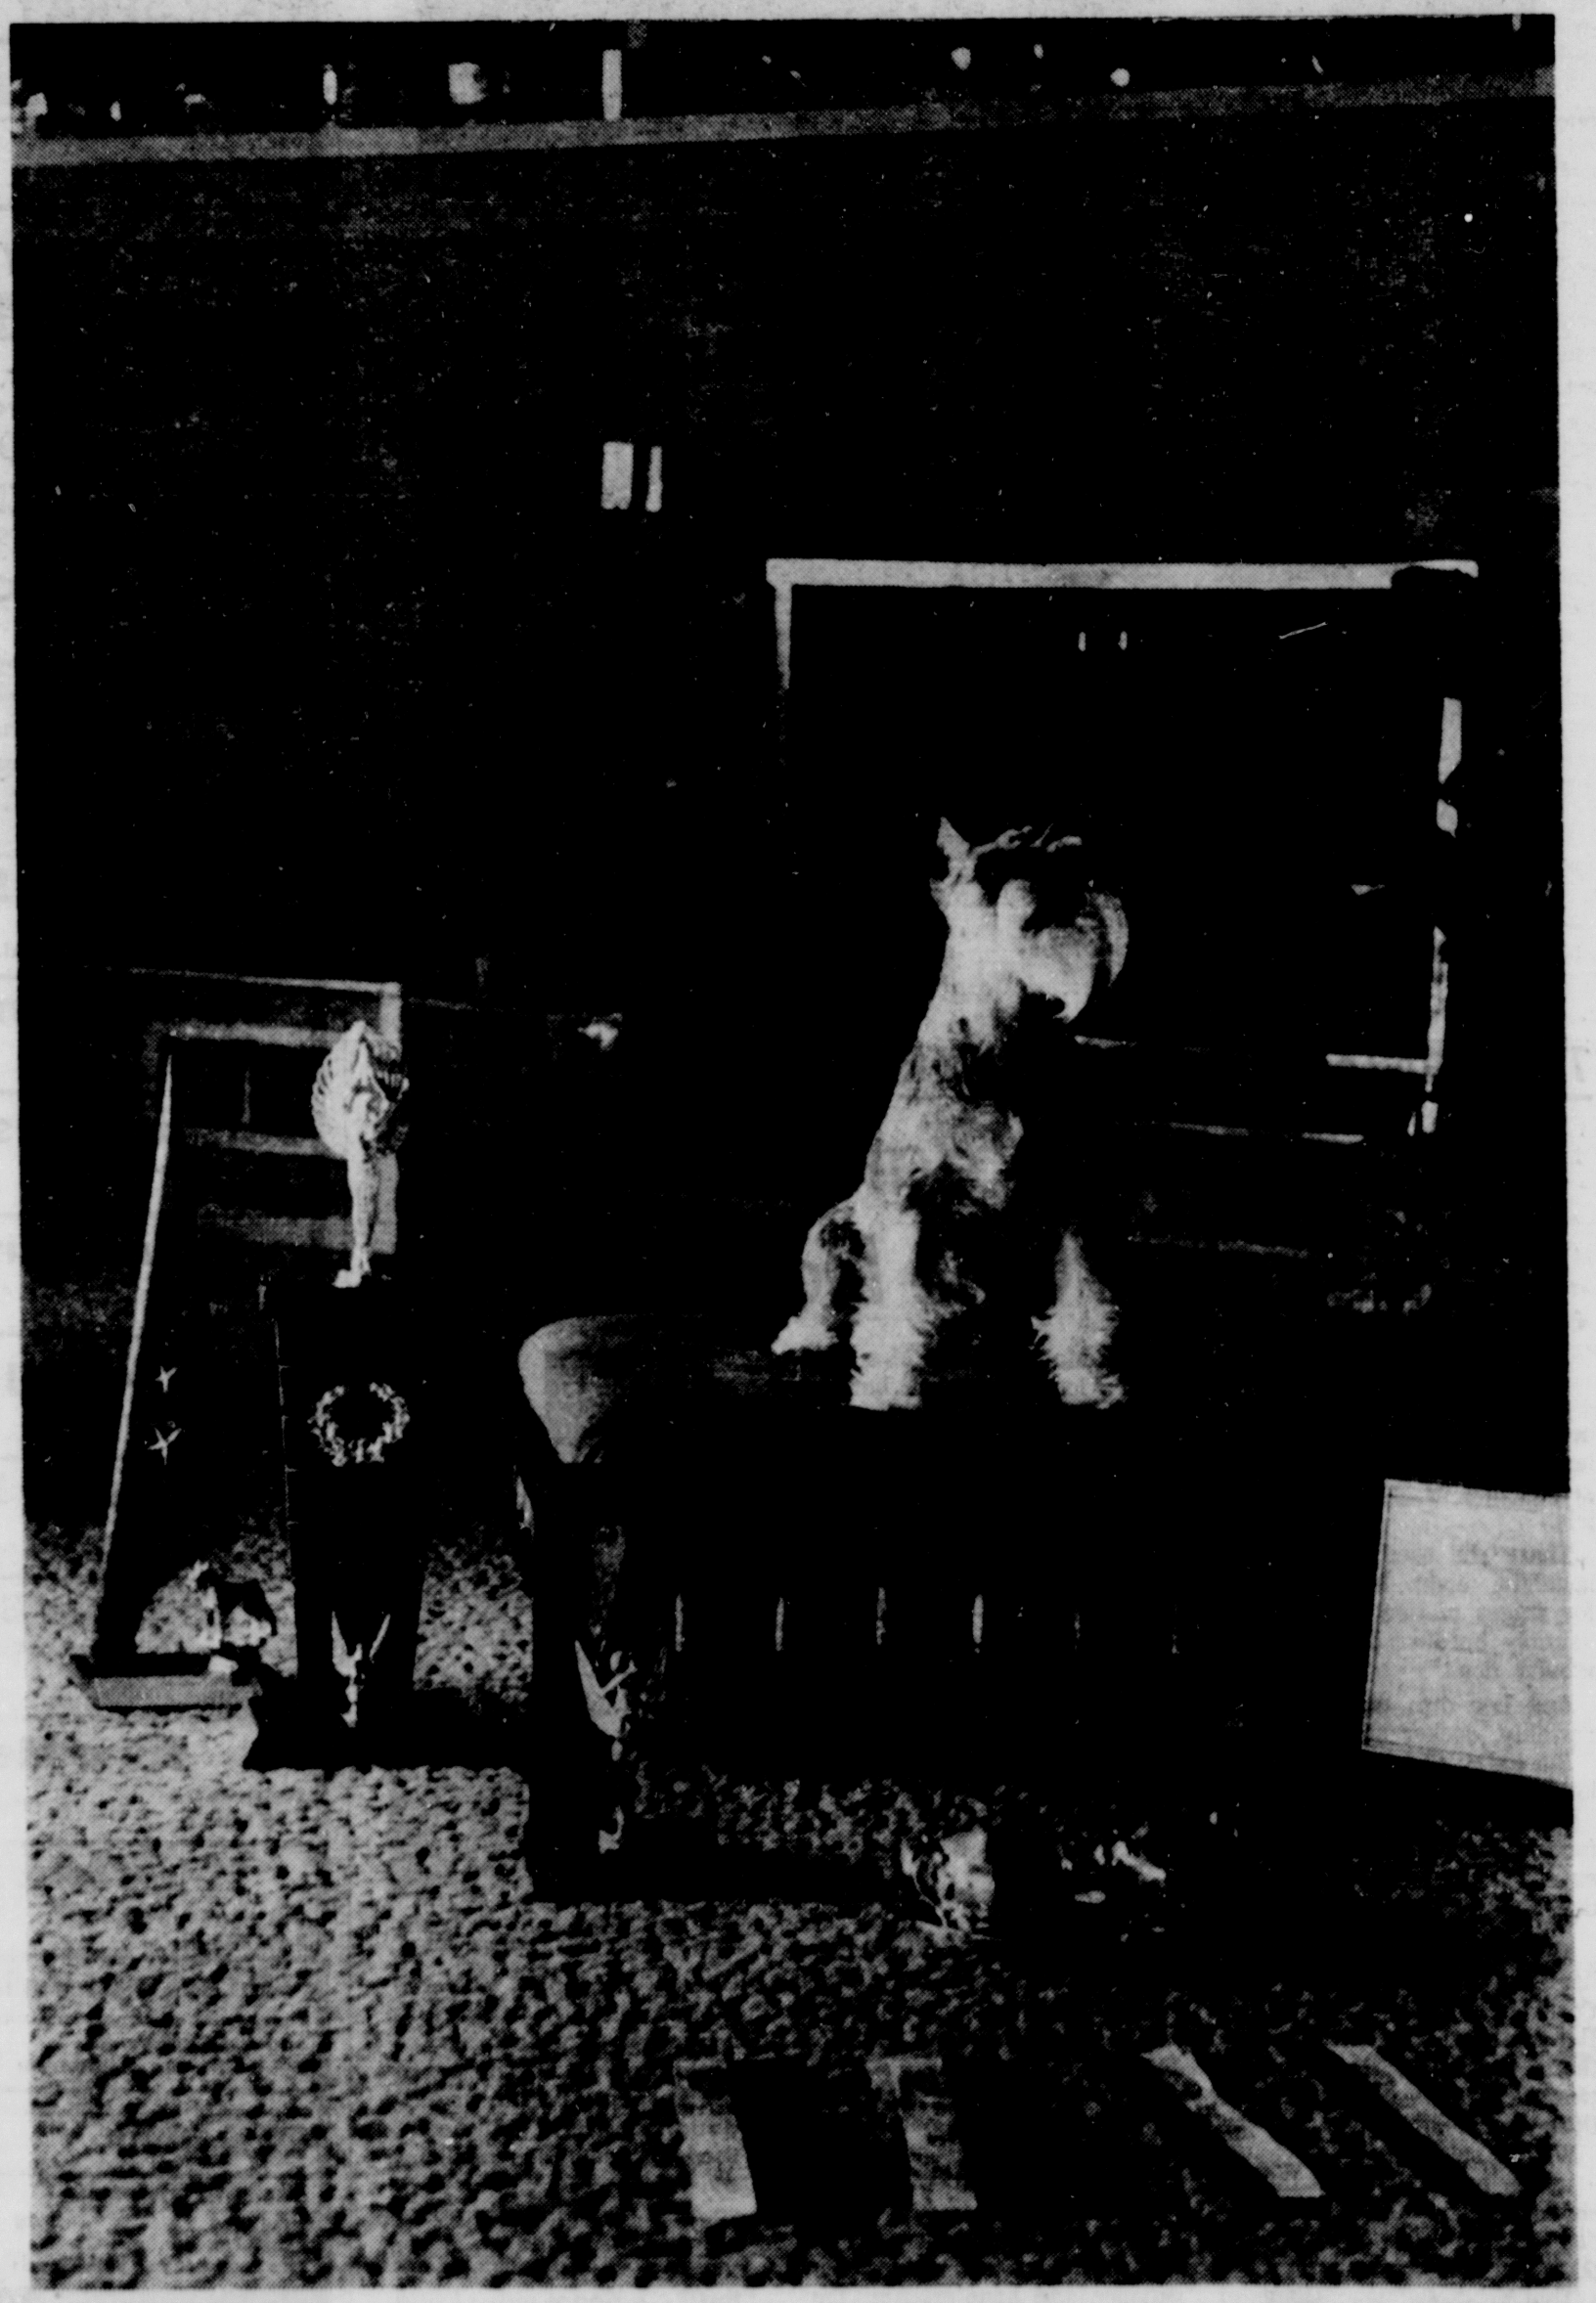

At the age of two days, they are taken to a veterinarian to have their dew-claws and tails docked. And between three and four months of age, their ears are cropped to give them their "tailored look" that is distinctive of the breed.

Sometimes Mrs. Monahan retains a part ownership in a dog she sells. "I really share them with their new owners," she says.

"What breeders fear most is what we call 'backyard breeders'," Mrs. Monahan says. "This can and will ruin the breed."

And she adds: "Anyone buying a miniature schnauzer should contact a reputable breeder and find out the many little things that make up our great little miniatures. It is important to know your breed."

"TO SUPPORT the dogs," she works as a cocktail waitress at Sausalito's colorful No - Name bar on Bridgeway. She began there five years ago.

Bar patrons like to kid her, she says, by sometimes specifying that their tips are to go for treats for the "minnies."

Until recently she, with associates, owned and operated a kennel in Fairfax — the Marin Hills Country Club for Dogs — which she designed herself.

She sold the kennel to Don and Shirley Madden, who now operate a dog training school there as well as offering boarding accommodations for canines. Madden is a Guide Dogs for the Blind trainer.

MRS. MONAHAN is an active member of the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club.

"I think every dog breeder and enthusiast should belong to an all-breed club," she says.

But she avoids membership in single breed clubs.

"You get involved in too many feuds and petty jealousies," she explains.

TO HER mother's dismay and astonishment, Mrs. Monahan's daughter, Kathleen, 17, a senior at Marin Catholic High School, does not share her enthusiasm for the "minnies."

"She goes to the dog shows with me," Mrs. Monahan says. "But she goes to watch the judging of the cocker spaniels.

"She likes dogs. But she just isn't interested in minnies. I can't understand it."

Still, Mrs. Monahan finds there are plenty of Marinites who are devoted to the miniature schnauzers.

AND THERE are plenty of out-of-county and even out-of-state dog enthusiasts who beat a path to her door, eager to acquire one of her "Minnies of Marin."

It is the result, she says, of "good solid line breeding."

As for the future, Mrs. Monahan says she is hopelessly "hooked" on the "minnies."

"I JUST PLAN on going on with my breeding program, and with the showing of my own dogs," she says, with the hope of adding additional champions to keep Christmas of Marin company very much in mind.

"They're my babies," she says. "I just don't see how anyone could resist them."

WITH MARIN'S MISCHIEF in her arms, Pat Monahan poses in front of the kennel--Marin Hills Country Club for Dogs —in Fairfax, which she designed and co-owned. She recently sold the kennel to the Don Maddens, who now operate it as a kennel and training school for dogs. Mrs. Monahan now makes her home in Novato, where she breeds and shows her miniature schnauzers under the breeding name of "Minnies of Marin." (Photos by Michael Bry)

EQUIPMENT IN THE NEW master control room of KPIX-TV is examined by the station's chief engineer, Ray Holtz of Corte Madera. Holtz helped design the room. TV Technician From Marin

Ray Holtz Watches Screen, But Seldom Sees A Show

On a recent Sunday morning while most of his Corte Madera neighbors were sleeping soundly, Ray Holtz was awakened abruptly by the ringing of his telephone.

It was 5 a.m.

Before he ever answered the phone, Holtz knew who was calling.

"Hey, chief," a voice said, "I hate to bother you but we're not getting voltage on the final amplifier and I'm afraid we won't make it on the air this morning . . . unless . . ."

"All right," moaned Holtz, "I'll be down in half an hour."

To Ray Holtz, chief engineer at KPIX-TV, the telephone call in the middle of the night was nothing new. For 16 years he has had to keep Channel 5's transmitter and studio equipment operating smoothly—even if it means being on call 24 hours a day.

In situations that would amaze and confound the average man, Ray has learned to cope with the innate perversity of some 2,500 tubes and literally hundreds of thousands of resistors, capacitors, transistors and other parts. Not only must he know where to find the one faulty component that could keep the whole station off the air, but Holtz has to know what to replace before trouble occurs.

Ray's appointment as chief engineer of the Westinghouse-owned television station in early August of 1964 came as a logical move for the TV veteran.

He began his broadcasting career in 1941 as a radio engineer with KYA and later with KSFO. Following the war, Ray returned to KSFO and served until TV appeared on the horizon.

In 1948 there were no television experts or teachers, so Ray taught himself all there was to know from books. Although he had never even seen television (few in San Francisco had), Ray requested a transfer from KSFO to the new station his company was building—KPIX.

He was assigned to help construct and install equipment in the new station's studios in the Mark Hopkins Hotel. And in one way or another Ray made sure that such early-day stars as Guy Cherney, Faye Stewart, Ben Sweetland and Del Courtney got on the air . . . and stayed there.

Ray advanced through a series of engineering positions and in 1961 he was named assistant chief engineer of the station. In August of last year, when his former boss (Ben Wolfe of San Rafael) moved to Westinghouse headquarters in New York, Ray was appointed chief engineer of Channel 5.

When not at work Ray relaxes at his Pepperwood Lane home with his wife Lorayne (a former teacher at the Edna McGuire School in Mill Valley) and three sons — Richard, 9; Jeffrey, 6; and Robert, 3.

Hiking on Mount Tamalpais and fishing in Marin occupy his leisure time.

Does Ray watch TV when not at work?

Says Ray, "My wife watches the programs, I watch the little white lines." The slightest flicker, momentary roll or imbalance of grays in the picture sends Ray Holtz scurrying to the phone to check with his technicians.

That's when Ray begins to even the score for those middle-of-the-night telephone calls he receives.

Handicapped's 'Second Person'

By DEEDEE ABRAMSON

A slightly-built, brown-haired 21-year-old, immaculately dressed, scurries between buildings on the San Francisco State College campus, her forehead wrinkled in concentration upon her next class and its challenge for the day.

An intense senior student, hair swept into an utilitarian chignon and dressed in a tailored suit, bends over a nature study book in class, assimilating the information necessary for her elementary education credential in the orthopedically handicapped and cerebral palsied field.

A laughing tomboy in skirt and sweater careens down the circular slide, holding in her lap a cerebral palsied child unable to walk, and her infectious enjoyment of the moment carries over to the child, resulting in cries of "more, more" when the ride is finished.

THESE THREE vignettes are one girl . . . Barbara Kilian, the first recipient of the United Cerebral Palsy of Marin Assn's. scholarship at San Francisco State College for a student majoring in the field of "Special Education, Orthopedically Handicapped."

Barbara, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Kilian of San Francisco, resided in Marin County for 12 years.

She attended Tamalpais High School for one year and Redwood High School for three years, where she was a member and president of "The Handicappers," a group of high school students who are trained in taking care of handicapped children and who volunteer their services throughout the county.

BARBARA applied for the United Cerebral Palsy Assn. scholarship while a sophomore at San Francisco State College and used it during her junior year to further her studies in the orthopedically handicapped field.

Scholarship money is provided for from funds collected during the United Cerebral Palsy's annual campaign, which is being conducted in Marin County during the next two weeks.

Two $500 scholarships are awarded annually to students at San Francisco State College, with preference given students who have resided in Marin County for one year prior to application.

FIRST consideration for a grant is given to a student who has a cerebral palsy involvement. These students may apply in their freshman year. All other applicants apply only after reaching upper division or graduate status.

In regard to fields of specialization, students with cerebral palsy may apply the grant for study in any field offered by the college. Other applicants may apply for study in one of the following fields: Special Education, Speech Therapy, Physical Therapy, Recreational Therapy or Occupational Therapy.

Applications are made to the board of directors, United Cerebral Palsy Assn. of Marin, Box 923, San Rafael.

AN ARTICULATE, dedicated person, Barbara expresses her desire to teach the handicapped with: "Every one is entitled to an equal education and the handicapped need more help to get an education.

"Normal children and adults have the ability to explore the field of learning without the guidance of a second person. They can function independently. They have the ability to touch, see and hear. Handicapped persons, in trying to get an education, cannot function without guidance of a second person."

THE WEEK DAYS of Barbara Kilian are spent on the San Francisco State College campus, above, where she is a senior majoring in the field of special education for the orthopedically handicaped. On Saturdays, she puts her training and her dedication to work directing the recreation program for the handicapped at the Terra Linda Recreation Center. Seen with her right are program participants Terry Sidon and Lorna Pippenger.

"It is my aim to be that second person for the handicapped," she adds simply.

BARBARA devotes her Saturdays entirely to directing the special recreational program at the Terra Linda Recreation Center, where handicapped children and adults from throughout Marin County come to learn arts, crafts and games, and to go on tours that are interesting to them.

A pilot program, it is sponsored by the Marin County Board of Supervisors. It meets from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and runs until June.

As director of the program, Barbara is responsible for planning the schedule of each Saturday's recreational activities.

One minute she is sliding down the slide with an apprehensive 4-year-old, the next she is monitoring the domino game in the corner for teen-agers. She may be instructing her volunteer teen-age aides in the rules of the next game on the schedule, while at the same time she is supervising those children who are collecting their paintings for the day.

Barbara's main interest is teaching in the second level of education—the second, third and fourth grades—either in a special educational school or a class set aside for the handicapped in a public school.

IN THE orthopedically handicapped classroom, she will teach mathematics, English, music, arts and crafts, singing, games, and recreational opportunities "which will do as much as possible with the capabilities involved."

In qualifying to teach in special education, she has earned the first elementary education credential, and, in addition, has won a credential enabling her to instruct techniques to a physically handicapped class of children.

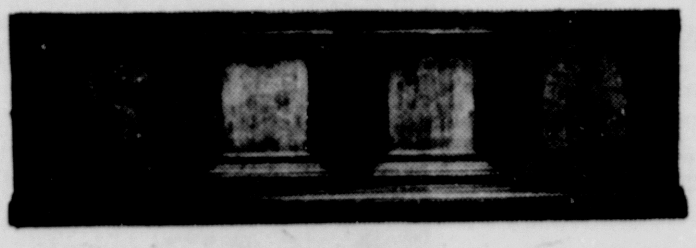

BARBARA'S last half of her senior year will be spent in student teaching.

The United Cerebral Palsy Assn. of Marin's scholarship for Barbara Kilian has not only helped her, but also Marin County and the hundreds of cerebral palsied and other handicapped children in California. That help will continue to grow and pay increased dividends in the future as Barbara devotes herself to the career for which she has so carefully prepared.

VIEWED FROM EITHER the street (above) or the beach (at right), the Belvedere home of the Raymond Menzels on Richardson Bay fits perfectly with its marine locale. From the street, you note the privacy that has been provided by designer-builder William H. McDevitt Co. Also the practicality of the children's entrance with its sunny courtyard and "parking lot" for bikes. The more formal front entrance is to the right of the garage. From the beach, you catch the indoor-outdoor feeling of the home and enjoy a view of the charming gazebo.

A Home In The Sun Beside The Sea On Richardson Bay

Sunshine and the sea are constant companions of the Raymond Menzel family.

Their new home, built by the William H. McDevitt Co. of San Rafael, is located at 39 West Shore Drive, Belvedere. It is on the edge of Richardson Bay and takes full advantage of this ideal marine setting.

The Menzels all enjoy water sports, especially sailing and swimming. Old ship lanterns along the front walkway reflect this interest in the sea.

AT THE FORMAL front entrance, the heavy beachwood door is flanked by panels of wooden grillwork, which harmonize with the antique black Spanish chandeliers used in the house.

The already spacious home is "extended" outdoors by sliding glass doors in every room. These large "glass walls" open onto the deck upstairs and the larger, always sunny deck below, taking in the magnificent view from every room in the house.

FROM HER compact and efficient kitchen, Mrs. Menzel can keep an eye on the activities of her five children in the family room, on the deck or on the beach (where rock collecting is a favorite pastime). Her bright sewing alcove, under the stairway in the family room, provides a view of the children's entrance from the sunny brick courtyard, where there is space for doll play and parking for bikes.

The off-white walls and carpeting throughout the house are a perfect foil for accents of bright color from many and varied prints and paintings on the walls.

The Menzels' furniture can be described as comfortable and interesting. Many of the pieces have been found in antique or second hand stores. They are bought as they find them, with no particular plan, and handsomely refinished by Mrs. Menzel.

FOCAL POINT of the living room is a stunning white wood and brick fireplace. The mantle has an overlay of matched wood carvings, originally part of a frieze in an old San Francisco mansion.

Beyond the popular family room on the first floor is a dormitory style bedroom for the three Menzel boys. This large room has plenty of space for boys to "spread out" and pursue their many hobbies.

One of the two upstairs bedrooms is shared by the two Menzel girls. The tone here is decidedly feminine, with color accents of soft pastels and well loved dolls much in evidence.

AT THE OPPOSITE end of the upstairs hall is Mr. and Mrs. Menzel's bedroom and bath. The off-white background and muted colors provide a feeling of quiet retreat from a busy family life.

The McDevitt Co. has built the Menzel home with a large, active family in mind.

The center of the house, and center of much activity, is the spacious family room and the outdoor areas. Here Mrs. Menzel can "join" her family and friends and still be in her "housewife's stronghold," the kitchen. The ceiling-high and very wide pass-through between kitchen and family room makes this kitchen seem an extension of the larger room.

THE GENEROUS size deck, reached from both living room and family room, adds delightful living space to this home. This "outdoor room" with its marvelous feeling of being on the water, has a charming gazebo built of natural shingle with dark wood trim, echoing the lines and materials of the house and fence.

The home, designed and site engineered (it is built on piles) as well as constructed by the McDevitt firm, is an attractive, livable home, with a distinctive charm that fits perfectly with the Belvedere surroundings.

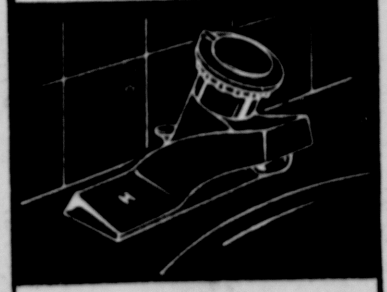

THE BRIGHT courtyard of the Menzel home, tastefully landscaped for visual beauty and easy maintenance, is the perfect place for riding a trike, playing with dolls or just loafing in the sun.

WITH THIS spacious lower deck, the McDevitt Co. has created an attractive and practical "outdoor room" where the Raymond Menzels can engage in relaxed family activities and lounging, or entertain. The distinctive "gazebo" type shelter structure affords privacy and protection from the weather. (Photos by Ken Molino)

New Converts For The 'Arkansas Traveler'

By DON KEOWN

Square dancing has undergone a revolution since World War II.

And what has brought it about largely has been the increased availablity and use of portable public address systems and portable turntables for recorded music.

Now, as the result of those innovations that began to gain popularity in about 1946, the caller can tone down the music to the desired level. Fiddlers and accordionists were not so easily controlled.

And he can look to the assistance of electronics to make himself heard, even in the largest auditorium.

DESPITE SUCH developments, square dancing fell into something resembling the doldrums in Marin County where it had once been a most popular hobby activity. The East and South Bays, and Southern California became the hotbeds of square dancing interest in California.

Now, however, officials of the Marin Square Dancing Assn. say, square dancing is once again on the upswing in Marin with increased interest evident everywhere.

The county has seven square dancing clubs that meet weekly or bi-weekly—the Buzzin' Boots of San Anselmo, the Cornhuskers of Larkspur, the Haybalers of San Anselmo, the Mill Wheelers of Mill Valley, the Novato Squares, the Novato Stump Jumpers and the Terra Linda Twirlers.

THERE ARE round dance classes for those who want to master that adjunct of square dancing.

And there are advanced dance groups for those who want to learn the really intricate maneuvers.

But most indicative, perhaps, of this renaissance of square dancing interest that is taking place in Marin is the vigorous activity in the beginners class field.

Like any hobby activity, square dancing needs a regular infusion of new blood to flourish.

TO ACCOMPLISH this, there are several approaches, the most common being the sponsorship of a beginner class by an individual club. Each member brings friends who are interested in attempting something new and broadening their interests. Then the club's regular caller teaches the newcomers the dance figures over a period of 10 or 20 weeks.

Usually, these sessions are held prior to the regular members' weekly workshop. And as the beginners become more accomplished they join with the regular members occasionally.

On completing the course, the fledgling dancers receive certificates of proficiency and become full members of the club.

THE BUZZIN' Boots, the Haybalers and the Stump Jumpers all recently completed beginner classes. The Novato Squares have just begun a new one.

The other regular procedure for square dance instruction is through beginner classes operated jointly by square dance associations and recreation departments. In Marin, the two have pooled their efforts with great effectiveness.

GORDON COLLINS of Terra Linda, caller for the Cornhusker Square Dance Club, puts a new hoedown record on the turntable and prepares to begin a call. The development of the portable public address system and turntable proved to be a big boon for square dancers and their callers.

One result is a large class now under way in the cafeteria of San Rafael High School under the joint sponsorship of the San Rafael Recreation Department and the Marin Square Dance Assn.

It will run for 20 weeks.

THE CLASS will meet next Thursday evening at which session new students will still be accepted. Then at the session on Feb. 11, the new dancers may bring friends with them. After that, only experienced dancers desiring a "refresher course" will be admitted through special arrangements with the teacher, caller Merle Basom of Alto.

Basom, one of eight or nine active callers in Marin, entered the hobby-profession ("more hobby than profession," he says, "because the money you make barely pays for your equipment") while serving with the military in Europe.

"Our club in Heidelberg, Germany, found itself without a caller," he says, "so I was sort of drafted."

He's been calling for eight years now, and estimates he knows between 200 and 300 calls.

"THAT IS about normal for a caller," he says.

The present trend is toward a speed-up in the calls and more complicated maneuvers than those that were popular in grandfather's day.

"And the surprising thing about it is that it is often the older folks who are demanding greater speed and more complexity," he adds.

Basom is inclined to frown upon the trends.

"I GUESS I'm a little old-fashioned," he says.

Indicative of his preference for the past is Basom's membership in Marin's only western band specializing in the hoedown music of the square dance—the Roll-Alongs. They refuse to leave the accompaniment field entirely to the record-player.

There are, Basom says, two classes of square dances — the currently more popular "singing call" named after one specific tune to which it is performed, and the "patter call" which can be done to any hoedown or fiddle tune.

An example of a singing call, he says, is the very popular "Oh, Lonesome Me." But they may range from such oldies as "Rag Time Piano" to "Blame It on the Bossa Nova."

The perennial "Arkansas Traveler" is an example of a patter call that has withstood the years and changes in dancing trends.

IT IS NOT necessary, Basom says, for a dancer to master all the new dances in order to enjoy the hobby. By learning the 30 or 35 most commonly used figures, he can perform almost any sequence by listening to the caller and following his directions.

The microphone has added another dimension to calling, in addition to giving the caller better control of the music and greater volume. He can work in more humor.

Now the actual instructions to the dancer do not occupy so much of his time while the dancers are twirling and promenading. So dance writers have added little inserts of wry humor.

THE WOMEN on the dance floor may find themselves being referred to as "old prune face." Or the 130-pound man may find himself under instructions to "swing her over your head," although his wife with whom he is dancing may outweigh him by a considerable margin.

More and more, patter is worked into calls between actual commands.

And dance calling is a language in itself, a combination of pidgin French and frontier lingo.

"Allemand thar" could only cause confusion to one not familiar with square dance terminology.

Beginner classes represent the entire spectrum of age brackets in Marin, Basom says.

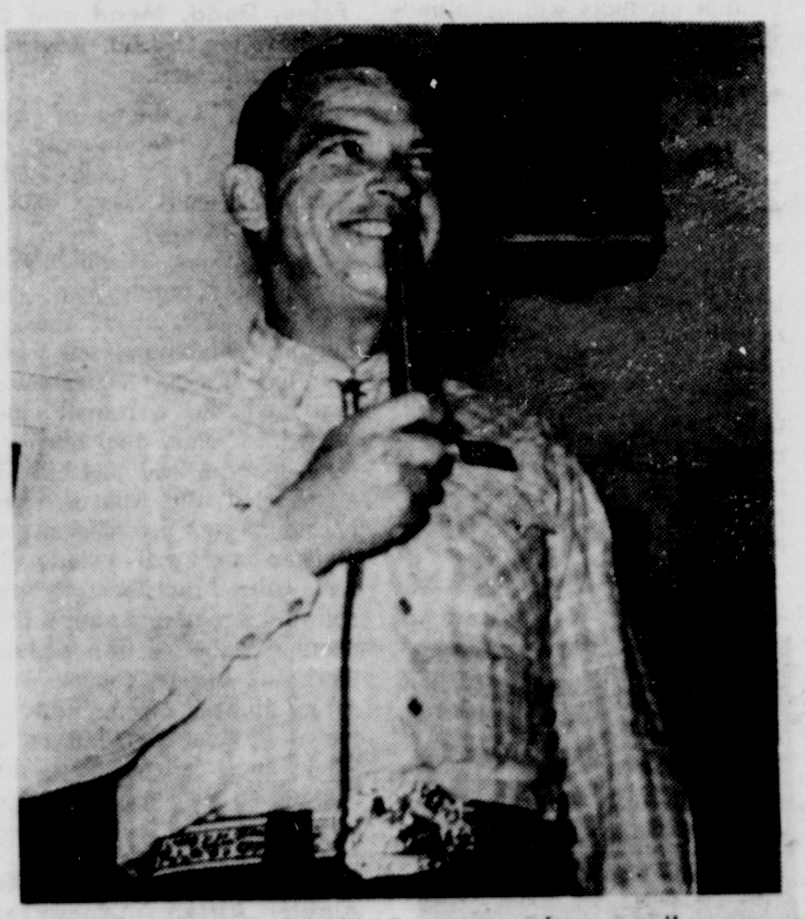

"SQUARE DANCING is something that seems to appeal to young and old," he says. "There are even children's square dance classes such as the Little Angels in Novato."

Basom himself conducted a club for teen-agers that was only recently disbanded.

These young people will be the experienced square dancers of tomorrow.

And, Basom hopes, ther are even younger Marinites coming up to fill the rosters of the beginner classes of the future.

Square dancing is, he and other enthusiasts believe, an essential part of the American heritage, as well as being good fun and healthy exercise.

AMONG MARIN'S POPULAR square dance callers are Merle Basom of Alto, left, and Jack Olds of Tamalpais Valley. Basom is the caller-instructor for the new beginners class meeting Thursday nights in the San Rafael High School auditorium under sponsorship of the Marin Square Dance Assn. and the San Rafael Recreation Department. Olds has headed a Buzzin' Boots Square Dance Club beginner class at Star Hall in San Anselmo. Note the approved western attire.

A Bumper Crop Of New Novelists

By DON KEOWN

P. S. WILKINSON by C. D. B. Bryan, Harper & Row, 441 pages, $5.95.

PROTEINS: THEIR CHEMISTRY AND POLITICS by Aaron M. Altschul, Basic Books, 337 pages, $7.50.

Early 1965, it is now apparent, is going to be remembered in publishing circles primarily as a period of intense activity in the field of the novel.

And many of the most actively promoted novels are the work of unknown, or relatively unknown, writers.

Publishers have been unusually active in bringing forth new talents, willing to gamble rather than to play it safe with the established big names.

The output, so far, has been rewarding.

"P.S. Wilkinson" by C. D. B. Bryan is neither the best nor the worst of these novels. It follows Philip Sadler Wilkinson, scion of a "good" family and "good" schools, through years that begin with service in truce-time Korea, into an aimless and uncertain post-service period of attempted readjustment to civilian life, and then back into uniform during the 1961 Berlin scare.

There are frequent flashbacks in an effort to show the roots from which Wilkinson has grown into the young man that he is.

All through this period, Wilkinson struggles to bring into adjustment the sense of honor that has been instilled in him, and the realities of the contemporary scene. He seeks to avoid conformity without falling into the social rebel stereotype. He strives for maturity without losing his idealism. And in the end, he does reach some measure of resolution of those conflicts.

Bryan, short story writer, magazine editor, writes very well at times. But he also writes unevenly. Splashes of brilliance are followed by blotches of mediocrity. And his novel deteriorates as it progresses, being much stronger in the earlier chapters than it is in its concluding passages. Which leads one to believe that he probably has attempted to stretch his material over too many pages, or has hurried his writing at the end in his impatience to finish the job.

"P.S. Wilkinson," nevertheless, is of sufficient caliber to earn the plaudits of such discerning literary judges as Granville Hicks, John Barkham and Shirley Ann Grau, the jury which has awarded the book the 1965 Harper Novel Prize.

The Harper contest has spawned some outstanding fiction in the past. We do not think "P.S. Wilkinson" is one of its best products. But it is, nevertheless, an interesting and promising first novel.

"PROTEINS" by Dr. Aaron M. Altschul is not, as one might expect, a discussion, either pro or con, of the protein diet theory.

It is a much more sweeping and somewhat technical analysis of the role of protein in the world food picture, present and future.

Dr. Altschul begins with a discussion of the chemical nature of protein. And for that, some recollection of your high school or college chemistry is a requisite. The doctor tries to keep the exposition on the layman's level, but the subject is not a simple one.

The author brings into his discussion all the varied attempts that have been made by science to unlock the secrets of the protein. Finally, then, he is ready to look into the part which protein plays in world nutrition, and how that role will increase with continued population growth.

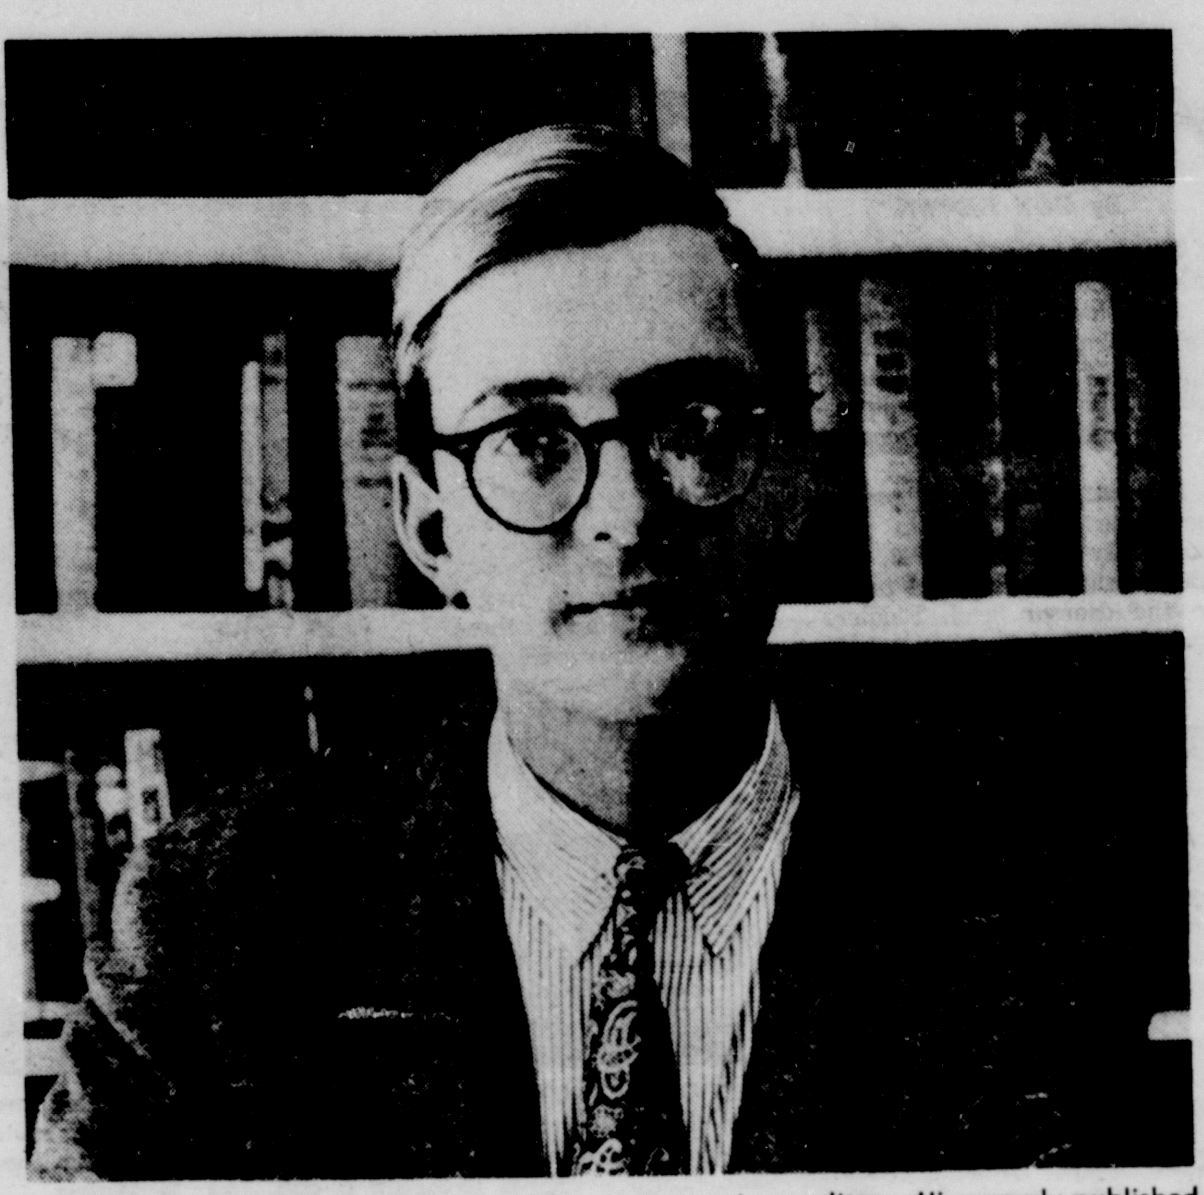

To Dr. Altschul it is plain that at our rate of population growth, a protein consumption based largely upon meat and other animal products will eventually become an impossibility. Sooner or later, man is going to have to look for substitutes, as even now less fortunate peoples must do. And it is important that more satisfactory substitutes than those now available be found.

Dr. Altschul suggests a number of possibilities—a more efficient harvest from the sea, peanut concentrates, processed soybean and cottonseed products, use of photosynthesis to manipulate protein content of plants, synthetics, improved agricultural practices, improved technology, etc.

None of these possibilities are as simple as they might sound. As Dr. Altschul makes clear, there are many variables and obstacles to be overcome and many factors still unknown. And the protein supply problem is one that differs greatly among peoples, although those differences will tend to level off.

This is an involved, complex subject. Dr. Altschul has done an excellent job of presenting a balanced and comprehensive view of it.

The result may not represent the easiest reading, particularly for those whose interest does not normally point in this direction. But it is a subject that affects us all. And while Dr. Altschul's interest in protein supply as it affects all mankind and his long-range future is the principal reason for the book, there is, nevertheless, a great deal of information to be found in its pages that the individual can put to good immediate dietary use.

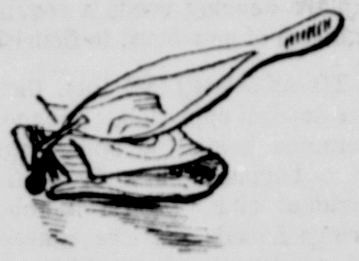

AUTHOR OF THE 1965 Harper Prize Novel is C. D. B. Bryan, short story writer and magazine editor. His newly-published "P. S. Wilkinson" is reviewed on this page. (Photo by Wallace Litwin)

FAWCETT World Library has published a new, revised printing of its paperback "Webster's New School & Office Dictionary." This is the compact reference work amazingly comprehensive for its pocket size that sells for 75 cents and is worth a great deal more.

Sleuths & Suspense

SUFFER A WITCH by Rae Foley, Dodd, Mead and Co., 210 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Working a theme of witchcraft into a contemporary setting isn't an easy task, but Rae Foley succeeds very well in "Suffer a Witch."

Young widow Elizabeth Boynton accepts employment on a country estate, about whose occupants she knows very little. She finds herself caught between two men, one a remote, introverted scholar, the other the outdoor type and anything but introverted. But what is worse, Elizabeth gets involved in some sinister and evil events that have caused murder in the past, spawn it again, and almost bring about Elizabeth's own death in terrifying circumstances.

The climatic scene may be just a bit too wild, but on the whole an excellent job is done of building suspense and atmosphere.

THE INTRIGUERS by Eric Ambler, Alfred A. Knopf Inc., 592 pages, $5,95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

What could make for more satisfying "forget your cares" reading than an Eric Ambler novel of international intrigue?

The answer: Four such Ambler novels in a single cover. And "The Intriguers" is just that.

Those who remember an earlier Ambler omnibus entitled "Intrigue" will also recall that it was definitely in the classic class in its genre. "The Intriguers" is no less.

Included in the new book are four novels published individually over a period of nine years, 1951 to 1960, and entitled "Passage of Arms," "State of Siege," "The Schirmer Inheritance" and "Judgment on Deltchev." All are topflight Ambler, totally engrossing. The reader will be amazed at how this talented writer anticipated today's fiction. And will join with us, we are sure, in voting Knopf a big bouquet for making possible this literary treat.

Two On Riders

MAN ON HORSEBACK, by Glenn R. Vernam, Harper and Row, 417 pages, $8.50.

THE NEGRO COWBOYS, by Philip Durham and Everett L. Jones, Dodd, Mead and Co., 230 pages, $5. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Man seated on a horse's back is history's dominant figure," writes Glenn R. Vernam in the opening sentence of "Man on Horseback."

In the 850 pages that follow, he rides through thousands of years, from the Vase Painters of Ansu to the rodeo riders of today, to bolster that opening premise.

Conqueror after conqueror prevailed by using the horse for war. Charioteers conquered infantry; then cavalry routed the chariots. The Great Khans scourged Europe on horseback. The Crusaders rode horseback to the domains of the Grand Turk, and were decimated and driven back by easterners who could ride rings around them — for their ancestors had been riding since the dawn of history.

The adventurers who explored the New World loaded their little ships with horses—for they well knew they could never get far beyond the beaches afoot. The horses the Spaniards brought to America changed the way of life of a whole people—the American Indian, who first fled in terror from the strange animals but later made them the basis of wealth and on their backs became a nomadic race of warriors.

Attila's Huns and the ancient Gauls, Vernam reminds us, put men in trousers—the better to bestride a horse. And the women of many Oriental countries still wear trousers for the same reason.

Vernam, whose own life has been linked to horses from his early childhood in Kansas to his present Oregon ranch residence, traces the story in detail that includes descriptions and drawings of the trappings of horse and rider since earliest records. This is a marvelous piece of research — and a fascinating story.

A much smaller view of man on horseback is taken by Philip Durham and Everett L. Jones, two University of California at Los Angeles professors, in "The Negro Cowboys."

The theme of writers Durham and Jones is that the Negro has not been accorded his just place in the story of the western cattle industry. To give it to him, they have collected an assortment of anecdotes dealing with Negro trail riders, gunfighters and other assorted western types.

The careful scholarship of Vernam's epochal effort is missing from the much smaller canvas of "The Negro Cowboys." For instance, the authors relate that Jim Beckwourth, the famous mulatto frontiersman, died "an early death before the middle of the century" as a chief among the Crow Indians. Actually, Beckwourth was full of years before he died long after mid-century; he guided Col. John S. Chivington to the big bend of Sand Creek for the "battle" of Nov. 29, 1864 — more than 40 years after he rode into the West with Ashley.

Again, seeking to enoble the role of the Negro, these authors claim that Negro cavalry rescued Billy the Kid from a burning house in the Lincoln County War. Actually the 60 Negro troopers were camped three miles outside of town while the Murphy fighters burned the McSween house from which Billy shot his way out—for the cavalry commander was a Murphy partisan.

These and other similar errors do not matter much; but of more concern is the contention of Durham and Jones that Negroes outnumbered Mexicans among the riders who trailed the great herds north in the last century. There is ample evidence to the contrary.

The Negro deserves his place in this as in other episodes of American history; but it is scarcely fair to give it to him by robbing recognition from Spanish-speaking native Americans.

NAT LOVE, who claimed to have won the title of "Deadwood Dick" in a roping contest in Deadwood, S.D., in 1876, is pictured in this photograph, one of the illustrations in the book, "The Negro Cowboys," by Philip Durham and Edward L. Jones.

Superb Tactician

PATTON, Ordeal and Triumph, by Ladislas Farago, Ivan Obolensky Inc. 885 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Richard Lyttle.

The biography is a standout both for its thorough treatment and objectivity. Farago is not a partisan biographer and does not defend his hero's faults and mistakes.

But Farago explains Patton so that the reader fully understands his mistakes and fully understands his remarkably good qualities.

George S. Patton was a tactician without equal. He could only rise to greatness in time of war. During peace time and even behind the lines, this volatile man, who said what he thought and sometimes said things that imperfectly reflected his thoughts, continued to get into trouble.

It was because of this that Patton's role with the Third Army in Europe was limited. At one point, his supply of gas was cut off, slowing down his drive. At other times, units were taken from him, preventing Patton from executing his bold plans.

Farago examines almost too throughly the disputes between the British and Americans in the campaign, the frustrating part played by the uncompromising Montgomery, and gradual loss of friendship with Eisenhower.

The author analyzes the politics of the allied effort so extensively that this portion of the book becomes a little repetitious, but it is the only time when the account drags.

The exciting life of General Patton makes lively reading.

In his concluding comments, Farago says that Patton was not a truly great man.

"He was no dreamer of vast human schemes. His aspirations did not extend to the betterment of mankind. He was not what Henry James called the absolute genius from whose thoughts and deeds the future flows inexorably. If Patton had never lived, the world would not have missed him."

Readers might want to argue with some of this after reading the weighty book. Certainly, if Patton had never lived, the crusade in Europe might have taken longer.

And it is easy to speculate that the crusade might have been over sooner if Patton had been given a freer rein to execute his tactics.

Saga Of A Clan

THE ORDWAYS, by William Humphrey, Alfred Knopf, 362 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Zinn.

The latest offering by William Humphrey, a saga of four generations of the Ordway clan as they go from the South to the West, falls far short of his talents demonstrated in the highly successful first novel "Home From The Hill."

Though the novel does finely chronicle "down home events" on the frontier, the author's best efforts are in explaining "We Southerners."

An excerpt—"We Southerners are accused of living in the Past. What can we do? The past lives in us. And not that single episode which those who accuse us have in mind: The Civil War—but all of the past. The Southerner has a sense of having been present there himself in the person of one or more of his ancestors. The War merely forms a chapter. For it is this, not any fixation on the Civil War, but this feeling of identity with his dead (who are the past) which characterizes and explains the Southerner."

THE BEACH AT FALESA by Dylan Thomas, Ballantine Books, paperback, 160 pages, 60 cents. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Dylan Thomas' screenplay has been issued in paperback prior to release of the film starring Richard Burton.

Based on a story by Robert Louis Stevenson, the film concerns two traders on a South Sea island where taboos reign and the evil Case challenges the newcomer Wiltshire in a weird web of intrigue and struggle for supremacy.

The story is largely bare bones ready to be filled out and given depth by the descriptive medium of the camera, and while it is not too successful as a book, it should make an interesting film.

The Fight For Preservation Of The Canyon

FRANCOIS LEYDET of Belvedere, author and conservationist, perches above the Colorado River on the precipice of the corridor to the Grand Canyon to drink in the awesome scenery. The Marinite's book, "Time and the River Flowing: Grand Canyon," has become a leading weapon for conservationists in their struggle to prevent the construction of proposed dams on the Colorado. Ageless cave dwellings appear in the background.

His Book Has Made Leydet A Leader In The Struggle

By ELLEN BRY

A former French army officer-ranch hand-newspaperman has written a book which is becoming a rallying point for conservationists who want to "save" the Grand Canyon.

For author Francois Leydet of Belvedere it is the second book published by the Sierra Club and aimed at dramatizing the irretrievable loss of the earth as man once knew it.

In "Time and the River Flowing: Grand Canyon," Leydet reports his trip down the Colorado River between the walls of the canyon and states the Sierra Club case: That the dams proposed on the river will flood part of the wondrous canyon. And the barriers will be wasteful, because dams already there do the required work in providing power and reservoirs.

Leydet's previous book "The Last Redwoods," pointed out to readers how dangerous man could be to the giant trees of the coast.

LEYDET CALLS it a "lucky accident" that he came to write the books. He became interested in using his writing abilities to aid the Sierra Club, talked to a club official, wrote out his ideas and found himself being asked to do the redwoods book.

He turned to reporting in book form about a year and a half ago, after nine years of editing foreign news and reporting for San Francisco newspapers.

Leydet was born in France and in 1940, at the age of 12, came to the United States with his American mother while his father stayed to fight in his country's army. Leydet has the clipped-accent English of a many-languaged background which hints at the French, German and Spanish he also speaks.

LEYDET ATTENDED Harvard Business School and Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies. He already had experience in the French tank corps, serving in Berlin, and he later attended officers school to emerge as the French equivalent of a second lieutenant.

With this experience, he began his newspaper career as a copy boy on a Washington, D.C., paper. He headed west and, finding no newspaper jobs open, worked briefly on a wheat ranch before finding a post on the Chronicle, later on the Examiner.

The boat trip down the Colorado which Leydet describes in the "Grand Canyon book" was not extraordinary, he says. "Even grandmothers have done it."

But the tale of the upset boat which landed him and his wife Patience in the icy water adds zest to the book.

AND THE STORY of the last dash down the river adds fuel to Sierra Club arguments.

Man already controls the river so that by pulling the right switch he can drop the river water level by feet every day. Leydet and his party made a dash through the last of the canyon to reach the end of the journey before the water level would drop to rock bottom—because someone pulled the switch after there had been promise from federal officials, of a full-water passage.

Leydet and the Sierra Club now are planning a next book in the big-book series which includes text with full page color or black and white photographs.

And sometime in the future, Leydet would like to write fiction. He's turned out some "dry runs", which will never see a publisher's desk, but says he is not yet ready for fiction.

THE "GRAND Canyon experience" apparently will stay with him: "Hike down the canyon all by yourself and let this thing, this feeling, ooze into you . . ."

To save the feeling for others, he suggests that writing the local congressman can be a powerful persuasion.

Storage: Always A Shortage

A good project for the do-it-yourselfer is the creation of storage space.

This can be done with shelves, built-in units or portable units. But the main purpose is to solve the missing link of the homemaker's storage space.

And we're not just closet shy, we're short of closet and storage space in every room.

Take the kitchen for instance.

WHEREAS THE old-fashioned kitchen in Grandma's day was roomy with plenty of storage space in a pantry, the modern kitchen is a tiny compartment. And it's a time when we are loaded with fancy casserole dishes, warming trays, electric appliances, enormous boxes of detergents, rolls of paper towels and so on.

We need pantry space more than ever.

One solution is to take part of the space from the room next to the kitchen, whatever it is, if it can be spared. A wall must be put up in the other area so a new door from the kitchen will open into the newly constructed area.

THIS ISN'T as farfetched as it seems at first glance. A permanent wall, plaster or board, is best. If it must be removed later the door from the kitchen can be sealed off.

An arrangement of the same sort in the basement can serve to absorb such things as outboard motors, sleds, skis, skin-diving equipment, fishing rods, bicycles. Shelves on one side of it can keep some of the articles off the floor and from being stacked.

Garages are great for storing personal stuff around a home — screens, storm windows, rugs and so on, but items like bicycles need to be more accessible.

GARAGE STORAGE space can be made of an open compartment with a platform suspended from the rafters. It can be as deep as to within a foot of the car hood. Rugs may be rolled up and stored if the garage is dry.

A summer closet is almost indispensable in the home. If one can build it around a window that can be spared for the purpose, so much the better — moths do not like light and cleanliness.

IF THE WINDOW light can't be spared, a closet may be a series of panels that do not go to the ceiling.

It can be constructed of pressed board, plywood or louvered panels without a door. Properly constructed, the opening isn't seen from the entrance to the room. Three sides can give plenty of space for hanging winter clothes.

A great big closet in every family room would solve a multitude of storage problems. But in many homes the little family room looks as if it was originally intended to be a closet. A few more feet on the building plans, and presto, another room.

EVERY MUSICAL instrument from kazoos to harps are finding their way into the family room. They must be put someplace when not in use.

Stringed instruments can't be left lying about to challenge the prowess of small fry with their rubber balls and bats.

One place overlooked for storage possibilities in most homes is the area available on walls near the ceiling. If a room has the average ceiling height of eight feet six inches one can play with several feet along the walls, a good place for enclosed storage units for records, games, catcher's mitts, easily accessible with a step stool.

There are places in bathrooms where a little probing often can reveal space that can be utilized for storage bins. Sometimes a shelf or closet may be built above the door for linens.

IF YOU are tired of fighting "hard to handle" garage doors, this one swings up, is easy to build, easy to open and provides an economical answer to your problem. It can be built to fit one or two-car garage door openings from materials and hardware readily available at lumberyards and building supply dealers everywhere. Send 75 cents to Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Garage Door Pattern No. 86. The pattern tells how to build doors measuring from eight to 16 feet in width, and from seven feet to any height. The door is spring-operated, but you can make it even easier to open by improvising a bit and adding a radio-control feature. (A new device just introduced in a number of Marin hardware stores by the H. W. Crane Co. is available to the handyman for installation as well as installed.) The door style is modern in design, superior in operation.

Gardeners' Choice— The Lovely Gladiolus

If gardeners had to be restricted to only one flower for cutting in their gardens, chances are they would choose the gladiolus.

There would be several good reasons for this decision, foremost being the long-lasting qualities of the spikes.

The long blooming season can be regulated by setting out the bulbs (or "corms", in this case) at intervals of from two to three weeks, beginning this month.

THERE IS plenty of color variety in gladiolus, from pure white through all shades of yellow, pink, red, lavender and purple. Then there are the "smokies," combinations of copper and orange hues.

In recent years gardeners have been able to plant several "green" or chartreuse varieties.

Best known of the gladiolus forms are the large-flowered hybrids. They are available in the wildest range of colors and adapted to big, bold arrangements. The stalks may be as much as four to five feet tall.

AT THE OTHER end of the scale are the "baby gladiolus" with two to three-inch flowers on 18-inch stems. You can get them from your nurseryman in shades of white, pink and red. They bloom in May and June from corms planted in December and January.

Many gardeners use them effectively as pot plants for late spring color.

In recent years there has been a growing interest in the "butterfly gladiolus," with flowers three to four inches across on spikes a little shorter than the large-flowered hybrids. The name of this group arises not from the shape, but from the presence of at least two colors in each bloom. The dominant colors may be apricot, white, yellow, orange, scarlet or red, blotched with deeper or lighter colors,

Like the baby gladiolus, the butterflies will bloom ahead of the large-flowered hybrids.

THERE IS another series called the "miniatures," used a great deal East and Midwest but not often seen in California.

The corms are generally available in spring and the blooms appear from early summer to fall, depending upon when they are planted. The stalks are about two feet tall and highly desired for table arranging. Hooded flowers are between two and three inches across in shades of white, yellow, orange, pink and red.

Certain new varieties of the large-flowered hybrids and the miniatures have been chosen for their outstanding color and performance and introduced as All-America selections. Because of their newness and short supply, these varieties carry a higher price than the others. Like most varieties of gladiolus in your nurseryman's stock, they are displayed with color pictures to make selection easier.

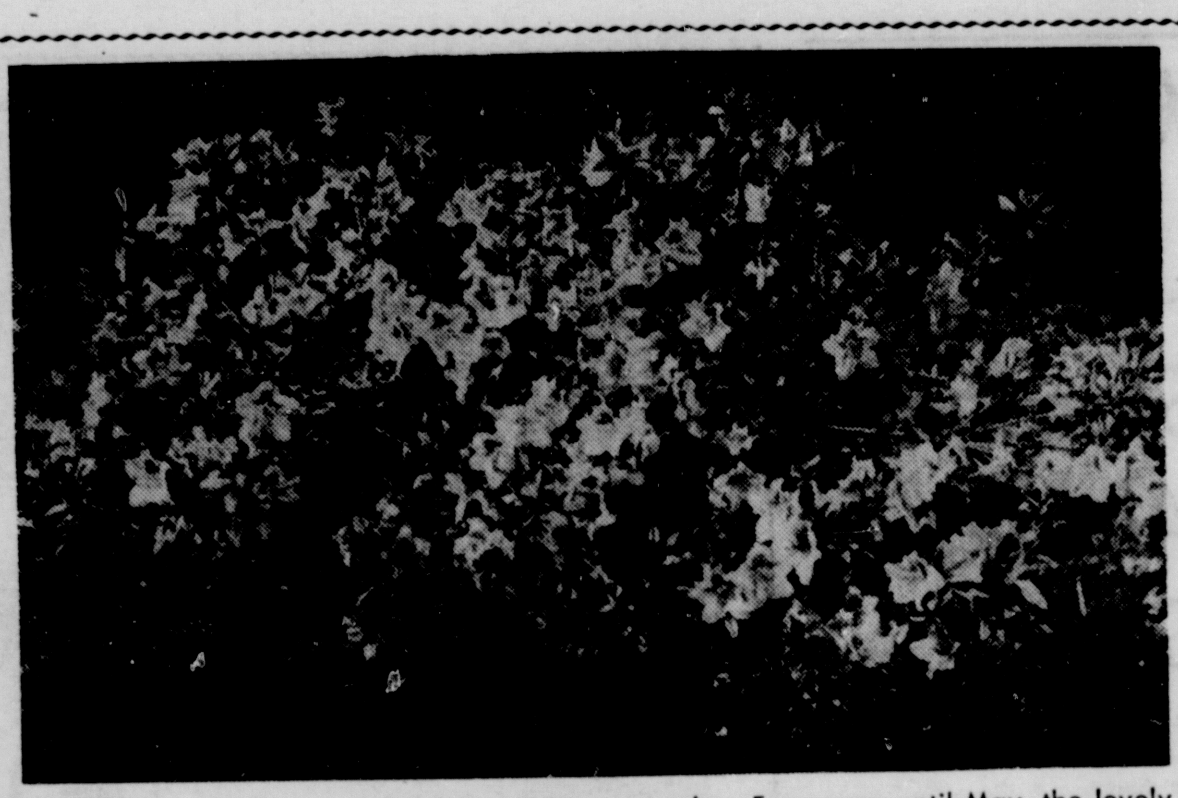

LIKE OTHER bulbs, gladiolus enjoy a fertile, friable soil, which can be constructed by spading deeply, then incorporating soil amendments to lighten heavy soils and adding humus to sandy soils.

Set the corms out on top of the leveled soil, about four inches apart in rows 18 inches apart. Remove about eight inches of soil with the trowel, apply a small amount of well-balanced food, then a cushion of plain soil, then set the corm on top and cover.

A good rule is to plant the corms about four times deeper than they are in diameter, with the pointed crown upward.

KEEP THE soil moist, and when the foliage is about 12-inches tall, feed again with the balanced food. Cut flowers when the spikes have one to three blooms open, preferably early in the morning. Plunge in water until ready to set up the arrangement.

The world "gladiolus" is both singular and plural and pronounced with the accent on the "o."

AN AZALEA in bloom can brighten up a gloomy winter day with its dainty, thickly studded blossoms. And it can add a permanent elegance to an otherwise simple planting, a shady border, a foundation scheme or a terrace container garden. From now until May, the lovely azalea will be the most vivid and appealing plant in your garden. So now is the time to browse the nurseries and select the colors and the varieties you want. The Clematis: Always A Winner

One of the most beautiful vines that can be used for enriching architecture, sun screening a patio or entry, or creating special garden effects is the joyously colorful clematis. And whether you choose the evergreen or deciduous variety of this highly rated vine, you'll find you've picked a winner where good looks and performance are concerned.

STURDIEST OF the clematis family and, from the standpoint of year-round use, the most desirable for landscaping, is the evergreen variety, clematis Armandi.

Sweetly fragrant, star-like white flowers almost smother the vine in March and April, bringing breathtaking emphasis to a dark fence, a roof gable or an entrance. But even out of bloom, the evergreen clematis provides an interesting, glossy-leafed tracery wherever you want a softening effect. Its handsome, dark-green foliage arranges itself along the stem in a delicate pattern of repetitions, and with proper pruning, it can be trained to an interesting all-year design.

Nurseries suggest that you don't try to confine this vine in a small space, because once established it grows very rapidly and can cover 50 to 100 square feet in three to four years if planted in good soil.

THE DECIDUOUS clematis is very accommodating vine. It tends to grow as long as you give it support.

Thus, if your trellis or chicken-wire support is 10 feet, you'll get a 10-foot clematis. If it's 15 feet, you get 15 feet of clematis.

These are grown for their magnificent flowers over a long season—spring through fall, then in deep winter you cut the vine back to about eight inches.

Henryi has magnificent white flowers five to seven inches across; Romona has slightly smaller sky blue flowers; Nelly Moser has light pink flowers with red bars; Mme. Edward Andre is deep crimson, and famous Jackmanii has regal purple flowers in profusion.

There are many, many others and your nurseryman may have some suggestions, but you can't go wrong with any of those mentioned if you want a small vine that puts on a big show.

Don't Let The Latin Names Of Foliage Plants Throw You

You don't have to be a Latin scholar to make a wide selection of new potted foliage plants to add living greenery to your home.

Most of the popular foliage (green) plants have easy-to-pronounce popular names, as well as their Latin identifications.

Here's a handy guide to a few of them:

IF YOU want a lush green philodendron type called Monstera deliciosa, ask for a "hurricane plant."

For a soothing bright green plant with fine variegated lines, you can order a "nerve plant," instead of trying to pronounce "Fittonia argyroneura."

The contemplative will find it simpler to ask florists for a "prayer plant," rather than try and remember "Maranta kerchoveana." And the musically inclined will naturally prefer to order a "fiddle-leaf philodendron" instead of stumbling over "Philodendron panduriforme."

NAMES OF familiar foliage plants enter into the animal kingdom, too. There's a philodendron variety called "elephant's ear" and a species of Cissus vine called "kangaroo vine."

For rainy days there's the "Australian umbrella tree," more ponderously known as Schefflear actinophylla.

Pals can be remembered with a "friendship plant" more easily than with a "Billbergia nutans." And luxury lovers will probably be flattered if you call their gift a jade plant rather than a "Crassula argenta."

Winter Is The Time For Feeding Birds

Winter is the season when the feeding of birds is especially essential.

So put out suet for the meat-eaters, seeds for the seed-eaters.

Or better yet, combine the two. One way of doing this is to make and put out "suet-seed balls" for your feathered friends.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔The greens will be greener if you spend a day spreading manure around your shrubbery beds and spring planting areas. The rains will leach the nutrients down into the soil to the root zone where you want them.

✔Prune fuchsias between now and mid-February. Established grape vines can be pruned now. New grape vines can be planted.

✔Many choice camellias are in flower now. Browse the nurseries for your favorites and plant while dormant. They make nice companions with azaleas in late winter. Shop for them both to spark up your February color scheme. Set out rhododendrons for a big show later on.

✔Begonia tubers are on the market again. Start them in flats or pots in peat and leaf mold and sand or a prepared planting mix.

✔Feed lawns again next month. If your lawn was invaded by crabgrass last summer, ask your nurseryman about a pre-emergence crabgrass killer that you can apply now to eliminate this weed's invasion for the coming year.

'65 Kingpins Of Vegetable Garden List

A cabbage, cantaloupe, cucumber and summer squash are the All-American Selections kings of the 1965 vegetables.

Chosen for the honors after critical testing and rating were the cabbage "Savoy King," cantaloupe "Samson," cucumber "Triumph," and summer squash "Chefini."

SAVOY KING is believed by the judges to be the most vigorous, uniform and high yielding of Savoy cabbages. It is good for cole slaw and for cooking from both spring and summer crops.

This first generation hybrid produces in about 120 days from seed.

It is heat resistant and fairly resistant to disease.

SAMSON cantaloupe, or muskmelon, also is a vigorous first generation hybrid of fine quality and flavor. Fruits are heavily netted, ribless and without stripes.

The slightly oval fruit averages six inches in diameter and seven inches long. The flesh is deep orange, thick and firm and the seed cavity is small. It is of average sweetness. The foliage provides good fruit cover.

TRIUMPH cucumber, a first generation hybrid, was bred for home garden and fresh market use where early harvest and disease resistance are essential.

Triumph bears abundantly, holds its dark green color, size and shape. Fruits are seven to eight inches long, slightly tapering. The vine is compact.

CHEFINI is an early, tender hybrid Italian-type summer bush squash. It has white flesh and is ready a week earlier than Zucchini. The plant will bear continuously during season as long as the fruit is picked.

Chefini may be eaten raw or cooked, skin and all.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER
KBRG Program Manager

The Philips label has been featuring a special series of albums called The Connoisseur Collection, distinguished by highly imaginative packaging and unusual music, mostly in the broad area of folk music of the world.

Here are some of the recent additions to this collection, which runs from Brigitte Bardot songs to a nun's choir:

THE GREGORIAN CHANT performed by the DOMINICAN SISTERS OF FICHERMONT—Philips PCC 612:

This would be an excellent introduction to the form of Gregorian Chant for the uninitiated.

The explanations in the notes and the complete translations of the Latin texts make understanding easy.

I doubt the complete authenticity of the recording. Gregorian Chant was usually sung a cappella, yet here not only is an organ used, but on some tracks even a harpsichord.

The recording must be reprocessed mono, although it does not say so. But the sound could be better.

SONGS OF FAITH THE WORLD AROUND — Philips Stereo PCC 605:

This is a sort of radio program, narrated by Raymond Van Steen, which takes the listener aurally to Africa, the Middle East, Asia, Europe, New Guinea and the U. S. to hear the varied musical expressions of the Christian faith throughout the world.

The original recordings are nearly all very poor quality, and the re-processing for stereo effect is highly annoying, with too much echo. Try the mono version instead—it might be better.

The notes to this and all the Connoisseur Collection albums are bound in the mid-section between the double sleeves. The artwork is exceptional on this and all the albums.

To get back to the music, some non-Christian songs of faith would have been a good deal more interesting, musically speaking.

AFRICAN CONCERT Sung by The Troubadours of King Baudouin—Philips Stereo PCC 614:

The interest in African music has grown recently, and this fascinating LP should find a ready audience. The songs are varied and exotic.

Complete translations or at least storylines are included in the handsome woodcut - decorated album notes bound into the middle of the double sleeve package.

The same group, founded by a young Franciscan monk, Father Guildo Haazen, can be heard on the exciting Philips LP, "Missa Luba."

The original mono recording has been re-processed for stereo again, but this time the result is very good.

MARINS POETS' CORNER

BEAM ON THE POINT

Flash On! Flick Off!
Guardian high
Of up-streams
Night swimming roes.

Dark-browning, the main
And the sea sounds
Channels thunderous echoes
As asking waves seek Bonita's light reply.

Regild nights stormy'd face

Pierce!
Misty shafts embrace,
Round and round winds
Hypnotics ceaseless race.

Flick On! Flash Off!
High guardsman of man's challenged foes
The darkening shades clock-wise pace.

MARIN CITY — LEON SPIRO

VIEWPOINT

They glance his way
then sluggishly shutter their eyes lest his hot leanness sear the film from their cold eyeballs.
And briefly,
faintly,
for their emotions are larded in fat,
they pity him.

He breathes the lilac air—
tho' their calendars sigh December; the hunger knot in his belly
tugging him joyfully erect . . .
and he pities them.

ACTOR ROBERT STACK plays a real life "role" when he stars on the first of four new hour-long programs, "The American Sportsman," on KGO-TV tomorrow at 5 p.m. Stack and companions will be seen hunting African lions on safari in the East Kenya bush.

THIS VISUALIZATION painted by English artist Brian Hope-Taylor depicts the prehistoric circular monument of Stonehenge as it may have looked upon completion about 1500 B.C. The controversy as to the original function of Stonehenge is the subject of a news special, "The Mystery of Stonehenge," to be seen Monday at 10 p.m. on KPIX-TV.

Scientific Sleuths At Stonehenge

NEW YORK—A new theory about the ancient ruins of Stonehenge, the controversy it provoked, and the filmed findings of a television news production unit form the basis of a modern "scientific detective story" in "The Mystery of Stonehenge," to be broadcast in color as an hour-long CBS news special Monday at 10 p.m. on KPIX-TV.

CBS European news chief Charles Collingwood and London correspondent Alexander Kendrick are the reporters; Collingwood also provides the narration.

THE MASSIVE stone ruins of Stonehenge, standing on the Salisbury plain 90 miles south of London and dating back to the second millenium B.C., have been the subject of scientific and popular speculation for centuries. The newest theory about their original function was propounded last June by Dr. Gerald Hawkins, an astronomer at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, Cambridge, Mass., and has been the subject of considerable controversy since.

"The Mystery of Stonehenge" takes up the theory and the controversy, and goes one step farther—it includes a pictorial effort undertaken by CBS to test the theory.

Dr. Hawkins, in an article published in the June, 1964, issue of Harper's magazine, set forth the theory that Stonehenge was, in fact, an astronomical observatory and a crude computer.

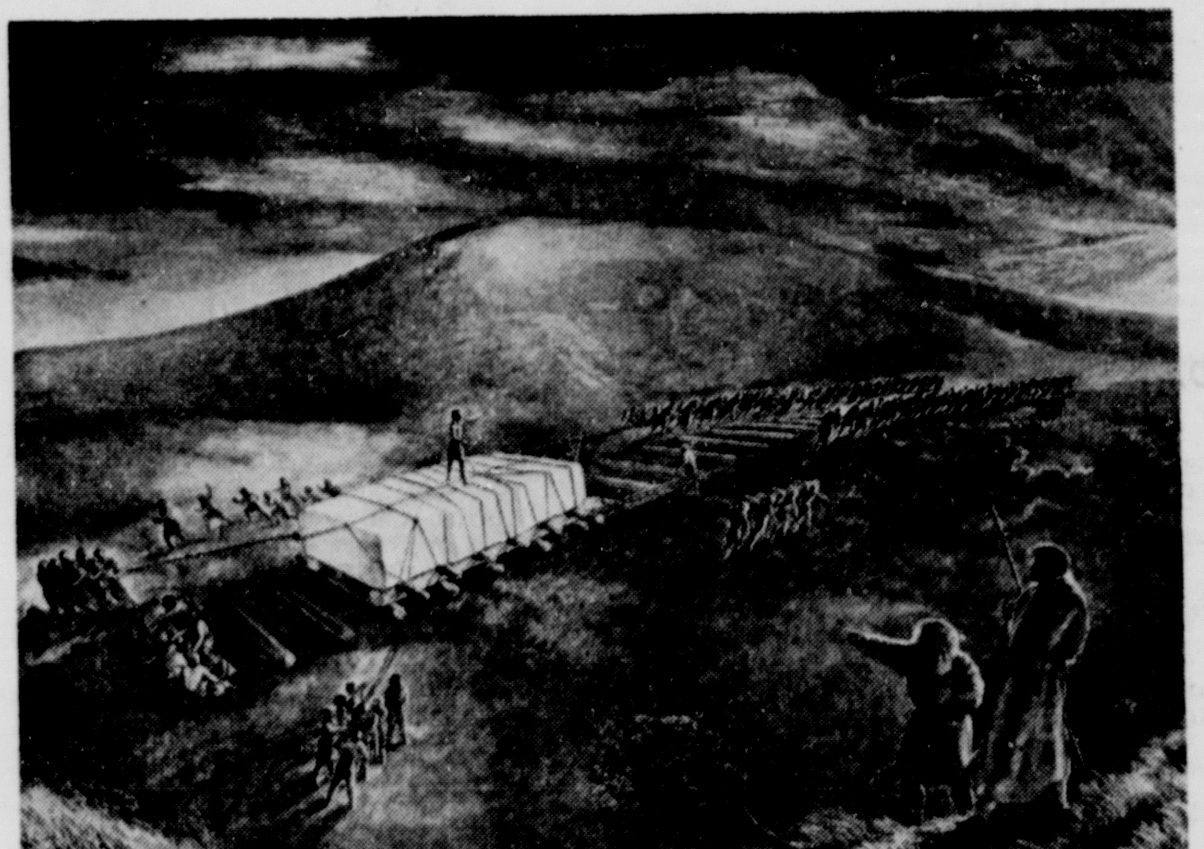

FOLLOWING THE publication of his theory, CBS News assigned producer Harry Morgan to set up cameras at the Stonehenge site in an attempt to test the Hawkins concept with a filmed record. These films form the climax of the broadcast.

In addition to Dr. Hawkins, who is also a research associate at Harvard College Observatory and chairman of the Department of Astronomy of Boston University, the broadcast includes an extensive interview with R.J.C. Atkinson, professor of archaeology at University College, Cardiff, South Wales, and a leading authority on Stonehenge.

Professor Atkinson has strong doubts about the intellectual ability of prehistoric man to construct or create a structure for as sophisticated a purpose as Dr. Hawkins' theory would imply.

ALSO INTERVIEWED are Dr. Flyn Danniel, fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge University, professor of pre-history and an archaeologist; Dr. Frank George of the University of Bristol, head of the cybernetics unit of the university and a computer consultant to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; Harold Richards, an astronomer at the Royal Greenwich Observatory, and Patrick Moore, fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society.

The broadcast was also filmed on location on Prescelly Mountain in Wales, at Cambridge University, in London, and at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory.

ANOTHER PAINTING by Brian Hope-Taylor shows the possible method by which the prehistoric inhabitants of England may have brought the massive stone blocks to the site of the great circular monument. (Paintings copyrighted, 1960, by National Geographic Society)
